TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
July 5th, 1915.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening. Mayor W. T. Gibbard in the chair.

Present—Reeve Denison and Councillors Walters, Wiseman, Waller, Carson, Dickinson and Graham.

The minutes of the last regular session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from W. A. Grange, secretary of the Local Board of Health, on behalf of the Board of Health, asking the council to have enforced the by-law requiring all property owners on lines of permanent sewers to make connections with said sewers, and that all slop water and other liquid effluvia be drained into said connections, and also that the council be requested to require that when the sewer on Bridge street, westerly from West street, be constructed that the property owners along this sewer be required at the time the sewer is in the course of construction, and the sewer trench is open, to make connections from their several premises with the sewer, in order that the present drainage into the creek may be stopped at as early a date as possible.

Laid on the table until the order of motions.

A deputation consisting of Messrs. T. W. Simpson, John Thompson, G. F. Rutan, H. E. Smith, C. Shorey and Alpine Wood, residents on Bridge street, appeared before the council asking that the road on Bridge street, between Robert and Adelphi streets, be repaired and put in a sanitary condition as soon as possible.

Moved by Councillor Walters, seconded by Councillor Wiseman, that as the request of the deputation is just and reasonable, the Streets Committee be instructed to repair (in so far as their appropriation will allow) that section of Bridge street, between Robert and Adelphi streets. Carried.

Mr. Robt. Solmes addressed the council in reference to a cement pavement in front of his property on Water street.

He is making some improvements to his property, and also intends building cement walks leading from his residence to the street walk. In order that he might get the proper level for his private walks he would like the pavement laid down as soon as possible.

Referred to the Streets Committee to report.

A by-law for the closing of the road running between the office and finishing rooms of the Gibbard Furniture Co., was given its third reading and finally passed.

The by-law for striking the rate and fixing the taxation of the Town of Napanee for the year 1915 was put through its various stages and finally passed.

BY-LAW NO. 959.

A By-law to levy the rate necessary for raising the taxes for the year 1915.

Passed the 5th day of July, A.D. 1915.

YOUNG LIBERAL CLUB

A very representative meeting of young Liberals of the county was held in the town hall on Monday evening for the purpose of forming a Young Liberal Club for Lennox and Addington, and the meeting unanimously decided that such an organization should be carried out. While the principal object of the organization is political, the social end of the club will be lost sight of and will be made a strong feature of the organization. All Liberals, the younger men especially, are cordially invited to join and a special invitation is extended to the young men throughout the county to become members of the club. Rooms have been opened in Grange Block and arrangements will be made to have the rooms open for the accommodation of club members and their friends when they come to town. Reading matter and games will be provided for their amusement. Following the organization the meeting was addressed by the Liberal candidate, Mr. E. W. Grange and by Nelson Parliament, M.L.A., for Prince Edward County, who briefly explained the aims and objects of Liberal Clubs. Mr. C. M. Warner acted chairman of the organization meeting and Mr. E. J. Pollard as secretary.

The following officers were elected to hold office until the next annual meeting:

President—Mr. Alpine Woods,
Vice President—Mr. Harry Johnston, Mr. Leonard Gardiner.

Corresponding Secretary—Mr. J. A. Pringle.

Recording Secretary—Mr. F. Vanalstine.

Treasurer—Mr. Geo. W. Gibbard.

Librarian—Mr. Clarence Vine.

Executive—Messrs. Jos. Haycock, Jr., P. J. Murphy, Guy Simmons, W. B. Pringle, J. R. Magee, Harold Rye, W. R. Lott, Wm. McLaughlin, with representatives from Glen Island, Bath, and the northern townships be elected later.

EARLY COLLAPSE LIKELY

Turks at Dardanelles Show Signs of Weakness

Correspondent at Mytilene Declared That They Are Running Short Ammunition and That Morale Troops Is Impaired—German Post Machine Guns Near Trerto Force Turks to Fight.

LONDON, July 5.—The Lo-Chronicle has the following despatch from its correspondent in Mytilene:

"Operations during the past week have sensibly improved the position of the allies in the Gallipoli Peninsula. The British advance on left some days ago not only mentored an important gain of ground, signified progress which put the lines in a position to threaten ously the Turkish occupation of Baba.

"In connection with this there two important factors. First, there a scarcity of ammunition on the Turkish side? During the month no munitions reached the allies
by land through the Balkan States.
The productive capacity of the Turkish factories has fallen critically to zero, mainly owing to lack of material, but also on account of the scarcity of skilled labor.
Second factor, which creates hope of a Turkish collapse at an early date, is the drooping spirit of the soldiers who are taken prisoner.

"These say that their commander would willingly surrender, but Germans take strong measures make it difficult to do so. Macgins under picked men are placed commanding positions behind trenches, and no hesitation is shown in firing on the men who show the slightest inclination to fighting or surrender.

"I hear inspiring accounts of valiant work being done by French artillery. On one occasion during four hours the French infantry held between 8,000 and 10,000 men on the quadruple line of Turkish trenches over 430 yards long.

"I have it upon good authority that Von der Goltz has asked Turkish Government for an additional 300,000 men, who must be provided before he can accept full responsibility for the future operations for the defence of Constantinople."

An official statement given out by the British Government Friday evening announces the capture of trenches in the Dardanelles operations which complete the capture of that part of the Turkish line by the French on June 21.

The full text of the statement reads:

"General Sir Ian Hamilton reported that on the afternoon of June 21 hostile columns moving west from Achille Baba and south from I Bahr towards the Turkish flank indicated that the enemy was preparing for a counter-attack against a position we captured the previous day. During the evening two mine galleries in front of our right centre were blown in, which the enemy subjected trenches to a heavy rifle and machine gun fire for two hours.
A lull and another outburst of determined attack was made the left of our position with the onset. This attack was repulsed

Hanging Rebel Albanians.

LONDON, July 5.—The Serbians are not in any hurry to occupy Durazzo. Meanwhile they are on the friendly terms with Essad Pasha, who is busy convicting rebel ring-leaders captured by the Serbians. A special court has been formed for the purpose, and this is sentencing many to death. Seventeen rebels were hanged Wednesday, and other executions are to follow. The pacification of Albania thus is assured, since the rebels are rapidly diminishing in numbers. The booty in Austrian arms and ammunition taken by the Serbians is considerable.

South African Contingent Proposed.

LONDON, July 5.—A Reuter despatch from Johannesburg says:

"Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, Minister of Interior, Mines and Defence of the Union of South Africa, has announced that the South African Government has offered to organize a contingent of volunteers for service in Europe, and also a force of heavy artillery. He is momentarily expecting a reply from the Imperial Government."

"Gen. Bailloud (formerly commanding the French troops in Algeria) has taken Gen. Gouraud's place provisionally."

Major-Gen. Gouraud superseded Gen. d'Amade as commander of the French force at the Dardanelles on May 9. D'Amade was invalided to the south of France on account of an attack of typhoid fever. Gen. Gouraud is one of Joffre's "young generals," being only 42 years of age.

GERMANS SWING NORTH

They Are Engaged In an Effort to Divide the Russians.

LONDON, July 5.—At a rate estimated at five miles a day, Gen. von Mackenzen's forces are still swinging northward in Galicia and Poland in a colossal and daring endeavor to drive a wedge into the Russian centre and dislodge the Russians from the Vistula River and force them back over the Bug, thus splitting the Grand Duke's forces into two sections, with thousands of acres of swamp and marsh land between them.

If the Austro-Germans can continue their progress another week the British press expresses the belief that the Russians will have to give up Warsaw, and with it the whole line. In the meantime the Germans

SHOT BY PRO-GERMAN

J. P. Morgan Is Wounded by War-Crazed Crank.

Frank Holt, an Instructor at Cornell University, in Hope of Preventing War Supplies Going to Britain Attempts to Kill Financier—He Confesses to Bomb Outrage in Capitol at Washington.

GLEN COVE, N.Y., July 5.—Frank Holt, the former Cornell University instructor, who attempted to assassinate J. P. Morgan at East Isle, Long Island, Mr. Morgan's summer home near here, Saturday, has confessed that he was the man who set the bomb which exploded in the United States Capitol at Washington last Friday night. Holt admitted yesterday, too, that he intended to seek out President Wilson at Cornish, N.H., after shooting Mr. Morgan. Mr. Morgan was shot twice in his home, about 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

Mr. Morgan is reported to be resting easily, no vital organ being affected as a result of the shooting, the physicians say.

Henry Fiske, Mr. Morgan's butler, doubtless saved his employer from more serious injury by felling the assailant with a blow from a coal hod and overpowering him. Holt was locked up in the Glen Cove jail, and from his cell issued a statement asserting that he was impelled to go to Mr. Morgan to persuade him to stop the shipment of munitions of war from this country abroad.

The attack on Mr. Morgan was staged in the dining-room of the Morgan home. The assailant, refused admission at the door, pressed a pistol against the butler's body and pushed by him through the hallway and into the dining-room, where Mr. Morgan had just finished breakfast.

Mr. Morgan was shot through the groin. Whether he was shot once or twice was not made clear. Two shots were fired by the assassin. One of these shots, it was reported, cut through the fleshy part of the breast and passed out through the arm. Another report was that one of the shots went wild.

GERMAN WARSHIP SUNK

Russians Come Off Victorious in Naval Battle in the Baltic.

LONDON, July 5.—A German battleship of 13,000 tons was attacked by a submarine and blown up at the entrance of the harbor of Danzig, Prussia, a port on the Baltic Sea. At the same time a Russian destroyer rammed and apparently sank a German submarine which came up to attack the Czar's vessels. This information is contained in a Russian official statement issued in Petrograd yesterday, which says:

"On Friday at the entrance of Danzig Bay, a submarine, with two torpedoes, blew up a German warship of the Deutschland class, which was steaming at the head of a German squadron. One of our destroyers rammed a German submarine, which was attempting to approach our warships. The submarine failed to reappear on the surface. Our destroyer suffered slight damage in the collision."

The following official statement was issued in Berlin Saturday:

"The Admiralty reports that a portion of our light Baltic naval forces, returning from outpost duty

A VALLEY OF BLOOD.

The Meuse River Has Witnessed 2,000 Years of War.

The valley of the Meuse river, extending through France, Belgium and Holland and up and down whose course 2,000 years of intermittent warfare has been waged, forms the subject of a statement given out by the National Geographical Society:

"Three countries share the Meuse. It rises in France, flows northward through Belgium, crosses the Dutch frontier, sweeps westward through Holland and empties into the North Sea. Its journey to the sea is one of 580 miles, of which 460 are navigable."

"The valley of the Meuse for ages has been a channel for the ebb and flow of armies. It might be said to drain one vast, historic battlefield. Caesar pursued its path into the unknown, barbaric north. The wild Teutonic tribes pressed down between its banks toward the wealth of Rome. Christian Europe has been settling its differences along the valley of the Meuse by force of arms down to the present day."

Canadian Commission Will Be Headed by Senator Lougheed.

OTTAWA, July 5.—The Government has appointed a Commission to deal with the situation which will be by the return to Canada during progress of the war of the sick wounded from the front. It will be known as the "Hospital Commission" and will be under the presidency of Hon. Senator Lougheed, leader of the Government in Senate and Acting Minister of Interior in the absence of General
A. Hughes. The other members of the Commission are: Col. Sir H. M.

Lord Fisher Heads Inventions Board.

LONDON, July 5.—The plea of fish scientists that Great Britain cannot utilize the country's best scientific talents to combat German ingenuity in warfare found expression Saturday in the official statement that Admiral Lord Fisher, who recently was named as First Sea Lord of the Navy, is being appointed chairman of the "Inventions Board," which is being formed to assist the Admiralty in relation to naval requirements.

Mackenzie's forces are still swinging northward in Galicia and Poland in a colossal and daring endeavor to drive a wedge into the Russian centre and dislodge the Russians from the Vistula River and force them back over the Bug, thus splitting the Grand Duke's forces into two sections, with thousands of acres of swamp and marsh land between them.

If the Austro-Germans can continue their progress another week the British press expresses the belief that the Russians will have to give up Warsaw, and with it the whole line. In the meantime the Germans are massing more troops in the Baltic provinces, and the recent encounter in the Baltic seems to suggest that they contemplate co-ordinate naval action, but it is possible that the sea operations were only a feint.

In Southeast Galicia the Russians are fighting tenaciously, and have the advantage of a remarkable series of parallel rivers beyond the Gnila Lipa, and the Austro-German advance is likely to be extremely costly.

Some sections of the British public think the time has come for Great Britain and France to begin a general offensive in the west, and thus force a transfer of German troops from the eastern theatre, but the more conservative military writers think that the time for this is not at hand, and that the best aid England can lend her eastern ally is to pour into Russia every ounce of ammunition that can be spared without curtailing the necessary supply at the western front.

Swiss Massing Troops.

ROME, July 5.—Swiss troops have been massed on the Austro-German frontiers owing to the closing of the Swiss-German frontier by Germany and that country's refusal to explain the reason. It is feared that the German action is a prelude to a protest against the proposed imposts through which it is intended to cut off supplies from Austria and Germany. Germany evidently has decided to resort to reprisals and possibly to the violation of Swiss neutrality, since the Spanish Ambassador at Rome has been asked to look after German interests in Italy in case of a rupture between Germany and Switzerland. Germany's interests here are now in charge of the Swiss Minister.

Crown Prince in Argonne.

LONDON, July 5.—For the first time in several months the name of the German Crown Prince is mentioned in the official reports of the German headquarters staff. The report tells of a battle in the Argonne where the German forces were led by the Kaiser's eldest son.

It is considered probable here that the lack of mention of the Crown Prince in the reports of the past few months, which gave rise to rumors that he was either dead or badly wounded, has been due to the social stigma said to be attached to him on account of his alienation from the Crown Princess.

"The Admiralty reports that a forces, returning from outpost duty, steaming in extended order, met at about 6 o'clock on the morning of July 2, in somewhat hazy weather, Russian armored cruisers patrolling between Gothland and Windau (Russia). Isolated fighting developed, our weak forces attempting to draw the Russian vessels within range of other German ships.

"In the course of the fighting the war vessel Albatross was unable to regain touch with her own forces.
After two hours of heavy fighting against four armored cruisers, which
ritory, the Albatross, owing to several hits, was compelled to run

Oestgarns, in Gothland. Twenty men were killed and twenty-seven wounded. The wounded were well tended by the Swedish officials and

CAR SHOPS AS ARSENALS.

C.P.R. Will Turn Over Its Plant For Use of Britain.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, returned Friday from England on the White Star liner Lapland after spending a month in London conferring with Lord Kitchener and members of the Cabinet on the question of war supplies from Canada.

"It is the intention of the Canadian Pacific Railway officials," he said, "to reconstruct the manufacturing equipment of the company so that it can make any and every sort of material that may be called for by the War Office in England.
The entire staff of the purchasing department of our railway will be placed at the disposition of the Government and the officials will see to the shipment of all supplies and war munitions."

A Children's Day.

An important festival for Belgian children occurred on St. Thomas' Day, when the children were entitled to turn their parents into the garden and refuse readmission until the elders promised to give them the presents they desired. On Holy Innocents' Day it was the privilege of the children to dress up in their parents' clothes, take control of the house, and order the dinner.

Christian Europe has been settling its differences along the valley of the Meuse by force of arms down to the present day.

"In the forest of Ardennes the Meuse flows through a country rich in romances of Charlemagne. Vine-lands and hop gardens lie further along its banks, and then it washes great industrial cities, gathering to itself the ashes, rust and acids of factory and furnace waste. Finally it drifts through the flat lands of Holland, supplying the numerous canals which lazily divide the plains.

"Here and there, as between Namur and Liege, it cuts a narrow passage between wooded hills and cliffs, their difficult sides dotted with pretty villas. Just before reaching the sea the Meuse, here the Maas, divides, one branch flowing west and the other mingling with the Rhine to empty past Rotterdam at the Hook of Holland.

"In the beginning of its course the valley of the Meuse is a wide meadowland. It then breaks into a gorge, fringed with broken, tangled banks.
There is a wealth of scenic beauty along its way. Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, is said to have caused 800 people to be drowned in its waters."

To Make Pot Au Feu.

This is the national French dish and is really two courses cooked at once in a large saucepan. Bone, roll up and tie with string two and one-half pounds of lean beef; put it into the saucepan with the bones, two quarts of cold water and a little salt, and let it heat gradually. Prepare the following vegetables: One onion, peeled, blanched and stuck with a clove; one small cabbage, washed, trimmed and quartered; one leek, washed, trimmed split and cut in lengths; two carrots and two turnips, scraped and quartered, and a tiny bunch of parsley.

When the pot boils skim it and add the vegetables, with four peppercorns and three whole spice. When it nearly boils skim once more, then cover closely and simmer for about two and one-half hours. Remove the meat to a hot dish, pour a little of the broth over it, garnish with the vegetables and keep hot till wanted. Strain the broth, remove any fat from the top with white kitchen paper. Make it hot again if necessary and serve in cups, with fried bread dice handed separately.

Pa Fled Too.

"Well?"

"I thought you said if a boy would always mind his parents he wouldn't get into trouble."

"Yes, my boy, I did say so, and I hope you will always bear it in mind.
Give heed to what your parents tell you to do, and what they tell you not to do, and you will live to be a good man. Never disobey your parents, and harm cannot reach you.
The boy who always does as his father tells him need never fear that evil will overtake him, and —"

"But, pa, here's a poem about a boy that stood on a burnin' deck because his pa told him not to go. Just read it, and then tell me some more about harm never comin' to boys that always do what their parents say they have to."

OTTAWA POLITICS.

Politicians at the capital do not take much stock in a despatch from England hinting that Sir Richard McBride may become Agent General for British Columbia in London "if he is not drawn into Federal politics in the meantime." It is within possibility that Sir Richard may be Agent General for his native province in London, because Sir Richard likes English ways and needs the money, but the best bettors are wagering ten to one against his being drawn into Federal politics. Drawing Sir Richard into Federal politics would be drawing from the discard and that is never satisfactory.

Sir Richard himself is keen enough to be an Ottawa statesman, so keen that he visits Ottawa three times a year to interview Premier Borden and Honorable Robert Rogers, but the chances are all against him. Premier Borden does not forget that Sir Richard was at one time his rival for the Conservative leadership and the Honorable Bob long ago figured him out as a size 17 collar and a size 6 head. Sir Richard did very well as he had his own way in British Columbia where he was a favorite son, but when the surplus of promissory notes began to wear through in spots and a railway policy, evidently conceived by Sindbad the Sailor, began to bear hard on the people and Attorney-General Bowser began to kick at doing all the real work and taking all the blame, Sir Richard's glory faded rapidly.

At present the British Columbia Legislature doesn't know where it stands. Sir Richard says it is dissolved and Bowser says it isn't. On top of all that comes the affair of the two submarines in which Sir Richard seems to have played a lone hand because he liked the feel of real money. The good guessers are predicting that Sir Richard's government will be in good luck if it isn't investigated along the same lines as the late Manitoba Government is being investigated now. There is also meat for inquiry by Sir Charles Davidson in the split-chape aspect of the submarine purchase which has never been examined in detail. Which means that British Columbia not only has her own troubles but Sir Richard's too—a fact which will naturally have a chastening effect on his welcome home.

The Borden Government has had enough trouble with spotted reputations without inviting more by asking Sir Richard McBride to come in. Sir Richard will be more safely and comfortably located as Agent-General in London where he can chum up with Winston Churchill, the first British statesman to notice "the seal of high destiny on his brow." Little did Mr. Churchill think when he said that the seal was about to be shifted and that the destiny would be transferred to London to a shelf near his own. On the whole, therefore, Sir Richard's chances of being drawn into Federal politics are negligible unless of course the Borden Government is fond enough of discards to link itself up with the troubles in British Columbia just as the presence of the Honorable Robert Rogers in the Dominion cabinet links it up to the boodling scandals in Manitoba.

The Honorable Bob is not exactly a discard. He is what the conjurers call a forced card. That is to say he forced himself. He saw it was time to get out of the pack in Manitoba. To give him credit he did his best to postpone a new shuffle in Manitoba until he could pull off a change to carry him along a day or two. The joke was on Salt but the laugh was on Hook. They had a sense of humor, those Omaha robbers—in short they gave Hook the Omaha.

Two other discards are giving the Borden Government a great deal of trouble. Arthur De Witt Foster, M. P. says he will run again and W. F. Garland, M. P. announces that he still has the patronage of Carleton County. Although Premier Borden buried these men publicly and shed tears over them they insist on rising again. For answer all Premier Borden can do is to refer bewildered deputations to the burial service as set down in Hansard.

The Naked Despatch Rider.

The indomitable courage and resourcefulness of Trooper Snyman, of the South African Imperial Light Horse, is described in a thrilling story published in the Johannesburg Sunday Post. Snyman had to carry three despatches. It was necessary to cross the Vaal, and when he reached the river it was in flood. Removing all his clothing, he made it into a bundle and fastened to the back of his spare horse. Then he remounted his own horse and started to cross the river. The spare horse was swept away and drowned, but Snyman, on the other animal, reached the farther bank. He rode naked through a hot day and well into a cold night, when he found himself in touch with the rebels.

The whole of the next day, after hiding in the bush, he rode through country infested with the enemy, and, still naked, delivered the first of his despatches at nightfall. Then, merely stopping to get a pair of trousers and a blanket, he continued his journey, and next day delivered the other two despatches, after which he returned to the base.

Calais' Curious Street.

In Calais not far from the landing pier is what is known as the fisher quarter. The inhabitants of this part of the town, numbering something like 2,000, form a community of their own and live quite apart from the rest of Calais. The young people never think of marrying out of their quarter. Just in the heart of this district is a very narrow street, its width being about five feet at most. The curious thing about it is that the bottom room of every house is quite isolated from the upper rooms, and the tenants who wish to go up to the bedrooms have to come out into the street and enter another doorway, behind which is a flight of steps leading upstairs.

It Won't Roll Off.

The egg of the guillemot is one of the most peculiar and furnishes an admirable example of the way in which nature provides for the conditions of life. This bird is found on the coast, and the eggs are usually laid on the bare edges of high rocks, from which position any ordinary specimen of the egg would probably roll off. But the guillemot's egg won't do this. It has been fashioned by nature to stop on. The egg is nearly conical in shape, broad at the base and sharp at the point, so that it will only roll in a circle.

Virtue In Onions.

Onions are well known to be valuable as aperients, but much of their medicinal quality passes into the water in which they are boiled, and so they are best, says an authority, when incorporated in a vegetable

MARCHING TROOPS

Caring For the Feet of an Army
Is a Vital Matter.

AS IMPORTANT AS FIT FOOD.

The Manner In Which the Sock and Shoe Problem Was Solved by Our Military Men Has Given Uncle Sam the Best Shod Soldiers in the World.

The care of soldiers' feet is one of the important things in war. A soldier is no better than his feet. Many things enter into the sum total of military efficiency, but two of the great factors making for efficiency in troops are marksmanship and marching power. Infantry that cannot march would be as unfit as infantry that could not shoot. It may be because of the importance of the feet in infantry that the men of that branch of the service are called "foot troops." Infantry without good feet would be more useless than cavalry without mounts, artillery without cannon or a flying corps without an aeroplane.

Napoleon has been credited with saying that an army marches upon its stomach, which, of course, is true as far as it goes. Soldiers to bring or maintain their efficiency at the highest point must be adequately fed, and a world of endeavor has been put forth by brainy men to insure the proper supply of food, to put into the ration the constituents needed by the human system and to have the food well cooked. But it is just as true, figuratively as well as literally, that an army marches on its feet.

When a recruit or a prospective recruit comes up for his physical examination the examining surgeon gives just about as much attention to the applicant's feet as to his lungs, heart, kidneys, teeth, vision and hearing. He will not pass a man with flat feet, because that man could not march. He will insist on a certain amount of arch to the foot. Too high an arch, which, however, is rare in men, would result in his rejection. Any defect in the feet which would militate against his endurance on the march would be a cause for rejection of the man.

With the recognition of the importance of the soldier's foot came long and earnest study and experimentation with the soldier's sock and his shoe. The sock question was soon satisfactorily adjusted. The necessity of frequent bathing of the feet, especially on the march, was early determined on, and woolen socks, light or heavy, according to the season, were decided on for marching men. Fresh and clean socks are insisted on, and a sock with a hole in it or a sock that has been darned is not to be worn. At least that is the idea as developed in the American military service. In the matter of the fit of a soldier's socks it is prescribed in regulations that "the socks will be large enough to permit free movement of the toes, but not so loose as to permit of wrinkling."

When it came down to the study of the shoe the military men had a serious problem which it is believed in this country to have been correctly solved and with the result that the men of the American army are the

BOOMERANG AEROPLANE.

Two Frenchmen Have Invented Novel Flying Machine.

A flying machine that is neither aeroplane, balloon, helicopter, nor ornithopter is now being tried. It is called a gyropter, and is the invention of A. Papin and D. Rouilly.

Its principle is taken from a study of the movements of a boomerang and of the fall and flight of the seed of the sycamore. This last is a bladed screw propeller turning about an imaginary axis and balanced the weight of the seed grains so that it falls slowly like a parachute.

The gyropter is made up of a long body, with a head and a tail, turning on an axis situated one-third of the distance from the head to the tail. The seat for the aviator at this centre of rotation remains immovable in the middle of the great boomerang.

The thing is not unlike a grebe, the neck of which is turned at a right angle and ends in a hook. It is built of wood, strengthened by interior braces, and covered inside and out with canvas.

It has neither front nor rear. It is a body turning upon itself, a propeller-blade thrown into the air at given equilibrium by part of another blade placed there to balance the weight of the motor. This motor works a turbine which sends a stream of air at tremendous speed into the interior of the apparatus whence it issues from the curved end of the tail and by its pressure on the surrounding air sets up a rotatory motion in the whole machine.

The motor is in the head. It is a rotary motor, with nine cylinders making 1,200 revolutions a minute. The air rushes through a wide tube surrounding the aviator's seat. The latter is in a circular box on ball bearings. The air penetrates a sort of antenna made of wood and revolving about its longitudinal axis at the will of the pilot. This antenna is in a curved pipe through which the air rushes with force enough to prevent the car from partaking in the whirling motion of the rest of the machine. This antenna is the ruler of the apparatus.

Under the apparatus is a lens-shaped float, which acts as a cushion in descending and as a hub on which the machine revolves when starting on the ground.

The air rushes around the machine and is expelled from the end of the tail with a speed of 10 metres a second, about seven cut inches being discharged every second. The surface of the apparatus twelve square metres, and its weight included, 500 kilograms.

When the motor is tilted at an angle to the plane of revolution the whole, gyroscopic action makes the gyropter rise. There are two opposite gyroscopic motions, one the motor, the other of the whole machine, and these insure stability under the guidance of the pilot who can, of course, change at will the angle their planes make to the ether.—Johannesburg Sunday Times

Amazon Natives' "Wireless."

In the Juamaar region of the Amazon the natives use a crude system wireless telegraphy, which, it is claimed, has been in operation for thousands of years. The transmitter found by an explorer was a hollow trunk of a tree suspended from a horizontal pole stretched between two stumps. Inside the transmitter had been arranged much like a violin, and it was explained that when the instrument was struck smart with a small rubber hammer a ough of discards to link them with the troubles in British Columbia just as the presence of the Honorable Robert Rogers in the Dominion cabinet links it up to the bloodling scandals in Manitoba.

The Honorable Bob is not exactly a discard. He is what the conjurers call a forced card. That is to say he forced himself. He saw it was time to get out of the pack in Manitoba. To give him credit he did his best to postpone a new shuffle in Manitoba until he could pull off a Dominion election but before he could get squared away the house of cards fell in on him. The evidence goes to show that the Honorable Bob paid frequent visits to Dr. Simpson the Conservative organizer, whose dark secrets repose now in a safety deposit box while their owner seeks peace and quiet at the battle front in Flanders. It seems that the chief maxim of underground statesmanship "Don't write, Come," could not always be followed and some of the secrets had to be wired G.N.W. Luckily these telegrams are burned, Zebulon Lash, K.C., having discovered both as president of the G.N.W. and chief counsel for the C.N.R., which has a lively sense of favors done and to come, that telegrams more than a month old litter up the office and interfere with business.

The Honorable Bob's tangential connection with the Manitoba revelations brings the Borden Government in line with that amazing state of affairs in which Rodmond Roblin signed what he was told and tore up what he didn't like and Dr. Montague was too sick to see that his department was conducted honestly and the Hon. Mr. Caldwell instructed the provincial architect to jockey the figures so that the rake-off would stand the test of a royal commission. Speaking by and large the warning is against discards, one of which is the Hon. Dr. Montague. The late Minister of Public Works for Manitoba was a belled buzzard in Federal politics long before Sir Rodmond Roblin took him in.

The disease seems to have spread to the minor officials and affected them in various ways. The ghastly disgrace of it drove Provincial Architect Horwood to Rochester to have his appendix removed. Although his appendix was pretty bad it is not alleged that he had deliberately altered it along with the other state documents in his department. Then there was the curious case of Mr. Hook and Mr. Salt. What names for the Winnipeg Telegram to play with now that it is foot-loose and tongue-free. Mr. Salt went to Denver in pursuit of health and was followed by Mr. Hook bearing $10,000 to complete the cure. The idea was that Mr. Salt should take his time about it. A paternal government was providing him with the means to stay away. It did not wish to permanently injure his constitution by hurrying him back to give evidence before a royal Commission. Besides the scandal was too rotten to keep anyhow and no amount of Salt would cure it. Everybody knows what happened to Mr. Hook. The highwaymen of Omaha felt that they ought to have their bit too, so they gave Hook the hook. They hooked the money and let Hook go, also his gold watch and enough small roll off. But the guillemot's egg won't do this. It has been fashioned by nature to stop on. The egg is nearly conical in shape, broad at the base and sharp at the point, so that it will only roll in a circle.

Virtue In Onions.

Onions are well known to be valuable as aperients, but much of their medicinal quality passes into the water in which they are boiled, and so they are best, says an authority, when incorporated in a vegetable stew. Spanish onions are best when an aperient action is desired, but if they are eaten to promote sleep the tiny ones that are pulled from the garden in spring are as powerful as those of larger growth.

Old Carving Terms.

At the banquets of the eighteenth century the man who carved needed to know words as well as the use of knives. Venison he "broached," the pheasant he "allayed," the rabbit and woodcock he "unlaced," and the crab he "tamed." Dismembering a swan was "lifting" him, and the crane under his knife was being "displayed." The peacock was "disfigured."

All "Showers" Except Rain Are Welcomed by the Bride.

Bridal showers are now planned with much originality. While more or less collaboration is necessary in order that there may be no duplicate contributions to the shower and that all gifts may be suited to the occasion, the actual manner of presentation is a matter which the hostess often prefers to keep secret. In order that there may be ample time for carrying out whatever arrangement the hostess has decided upon all gifts intended for the shower should be delivered at the home of the hostess at least two days in advance of the festivity.

A tea table shower is a little out of the ordinary and serves as a means of providing the prospective bride with many small details for the afternoon tea service. At a shower of this kind recently given the articles were all used for the entertainment of the party and toasts were drunk in tea to the bride. Gifts included a handsome tea-cloth, 5 o'clock teakettle, a lemon dish and fork, a wicker framed cake plate and various pretty things in the way of sugar holders and sandwich dishes. Just before the party disbanded the various articles were all neatly packed, ready to be stowed away in the automobile of the bride to be when she took her departure.

Out of the Running.

If you are thinking of buying a brass bed don't do it. Brass beds are not in good taste at all. There was a time when we were fooled regarding this, but now we know.

So if you want a brass bed don't get it. Beds should either match the wood in which the room is furnished or they should be of white enamel.

It stands to reason that a bright and shiny thing that looks like gold ought not to be a bed. So let us put brass beds out of business.

Egg and Maple Lemonade.

Boil the juice of three lemons, one-quarter cupful of water and four tablespoonfuls of maple sugar until you have a thick sirup. Set aside until cool, and then beat in with the whites of two eggs. Beat very stiff, and then divide evenly in four glasses. Fill with carbonated water, beat briskly and serve at once.

is the idea as developed in the American military service. In the matter of the fit of a soldier's socks it is prescribed in regulations that "the socks will be large enough to permit free movement of the toes, but not so loose as to permit of wrinkling."

When it came down to the study of the shoe the military men had a serious problem which it is believed in this country to have been correctly solved and with the result that the men of the American army are the best shod troops in the world. The cost of the United States army shoe, garrison or marching, is in round figures $3, and so popular is it with the men of the army that they rarely buy a pair of private shoes for use when absent from post on pass or on furlough. The quartermaster shoe of the present day is considered an excellent specimen of the shoemaker's art and is vastly different in fit and finish from the army shoe of a generation ago.

In those states where these shoes are issued by the national government to the organized militia it is one of the perplexities of the national guard officers to keep their men from wearing the shoes in civil life.

Before the foot and shoe fit question came under the study of men concerned with the efficiency of troops there was always a great deal of foot soreness among the soldiers on the march.

This trouble was always severe and annoying among new troops and among old troops with new shoes. The old idea was to equip a soldier with a pair of shoes that would wear long. The stoutness and durability of the shoe was the main consideration. There was very little consideration for the foot that went inside the shoe. If the shoe was large enough and not very much too large for the man the matter was thought to be settled. Foot trouble among regular troops on the march has been greatly reduced, but of course has not been eliminated. Probably that ideal never will be attained.

A soldier's marching efficiency depends not alone on the size or what is commonly called the "fit" of the shoe, but on the shape. It has been said that Dr. Herman Meyer was the first to formulate the theory that the great toe must lie in such a position that its axis when carried backward shall pass through the center of the heel. The foot is a lever of the second class; the fulcrum is at the ball and great toe and power at the heel, which is transmitted through the tendo-Achilles from the calf muscles and the weight of the body between. This lever is the prime factor in walking or marching. The leg and body muscles balance the load or shift the levers, which are the feet. —Washington Star.

THE SPIRIT OF LOVE.

You will find as you look back upon your life that the moments that stand out are the moments when you have done things in a spirit of love. As memory scans the past, above and beyond all the transitory pleasures of life there leap forward these supreme hours when you have been enabled to do unnoticed kindnesses to those round about you, things too trifling to speak about, but which you feel have entered into your eternal life. —Henry Drummond.

Amazon Natives' "Wireless."

In the Juamaar region of the Amazon the natives use a crude system wireless telegraphy, which, it claimed, has been in operation thousands of years. The transmitter found by an explorer was a hollow trunk of a tree suspended from horizontal pole stretched between two stumps. Inside the transmitter had been arranged much like a violin, and it was explained that when the instrument was struck smartly with a small rubber hammer a vibration was created that carried miles over the hills. The receiver very similar to the transmitter, except that it is placed on a hardwood platform, the base of the hollow tree-trunk being grounded on platform. When the message is struck in the neighboring village, sometimes thirty miles away, this receiver catches the vibrations, causing a jingle, singing sound. The sound system, it is said, can be read by members of the tribe, and in the way news of victories and other happenings are told throughout the countryside.

The Craving For Salt.

If salt is not essential to life would those who have little or none crave for it? You should see, I have seen (writes a correspondent) the whole population turn out of African village on the approach of white prospectors in the hope of obtaining salt. The men demanded the women clamored and the children cried for it. Even the coffee-colored babies slung astride the mothers' backs thrust forth their tiny hands and devoured it as greedily as our English children sweets. A spoonful of salt all around established amicable relations, and when it came later to bartering found salt by far the most valuable medium. Value for value, salt purchased three times as much as coffee or fancy goods.—London Chronicle

"Why do you give thanks?" asked his friend. "I see no cause for thankfulness."

"Cause enough," was the prompt reply. "Why, man alive, if I had been along with that donkey I'd have been lost, too."

BOOMERANG AEROPLANE.

wo Frenchmen Have Invented a Novel Flying Machine.

A flying machine that is neither aeroplane, balloon, helicopter, nor mionthopter is now being tried. It called a gyropter, and is the invention of A. Papin and D. Rouilly. Its principle is taken from a study of the movements of a boomerang and of the fall and flight of the seeds of the sycamore. This last is a one-laded screw propeller turning about an imaginary axis and balanced by the weight of the seed grains so that it falls slowly like a parachute.

The gyropter is made up of a long body, with a head and a tail, turning on an axis situated one-third of the distance from the head to the tail. The seat for the aviator at this centre of rotation remains immovable in the middle of the great boomerang.

The thing is not unlike a great anjo, the neck of which is turned at a right angle and ends in a hole. It is built of wood, strengthened by interior braces, and covered inside and out with canvas.

It has neither front nor rear. It is a body turning upon itself, a propeller-blade thrown into the air and given equilibrium by part of another blade placed there to balance the weight of the motor. This motor works a turbine which sends a stream of air at tremendous speed to the interior of the apparatus, hence it issues from the curved end of the tail and by its pressure on the surrounding air sets up a rotatory motion in the whole machine.

The motor is in the head. It is a rotatory motor, with nine cylinders, making 1,200 revolutions a minute. The air rushes through a wide tube surrounding the aviator's seat. The latter is in a circular box on ball bearings. The air penetrates a sort of antenna made of wood and revolving about its longitudinal axis at the will of the pilot. This ends in a curved pipe through which the air rushes with force enough to prevent the car from partaking in the whirling motion of the rest of the machine. This antenna is the rudder of the apparatus.

Under the apparatus is a lens-shaped float, which acts as a cushion descending and as a hub on which the machine revolves when started on the ground.

The air rushes around the machine and is expelled from the end of the tail with a speed of 100 metres a second, about seven cubic inches being discharged every second. The surface of the apparatus is twelve square metres, and it weighs, without included, 500 kilograms.

When the motor is tilted at an angle to the plane of revolution of the whole, gyroscopic action makes the gyropter rise. There are two opposite gyroscopic motions, one of the motor, the other of the whole machine, and these insure stability under the guidance of the pilot, who can, of course, change at will the angle their planes make to each other.—Johannesburg Sunday Times.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

BIBLE STUDY ON THANKLESS, REBELLIOUS ABSALOM.

—July 4.—2 Samuel 18:1-15.—

"Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right."—Ephesians 6:2.

THIS Study discusses the death of Absalom, and is sufficiently explicit without comment. It will be valuable, however, to review the life of this young prince and to note some of his failures. He was not well-born. His mother, King David's wife, was the daughter of a heathen king nearby; and he had the disadvantage of being a member of the royal family and therefore not required to labor with sweat of face.

Absalom is first brought prominently to our attention by his murder of his half-brother Amnon, to avenge his sister's honor. For this he fled to his grandfather's protection. Thus he was still further removed from any good influences associated with his father and the true religion. After several years his father, who had never ceased to love him, was induced to invite him back to Jerusalem; but for two years more the king declined to receive his son into his presence. All these influences were unfavorable to the young man, but none of them can excuse his treachery to his father.

Absalom's Conspiracy.

There were judges throughout the land of Israel to decide ordinary causes of discontent; but when their decisions were unsatisfactory, appeal was made to the king as to a superior court. King David was busily engaged in preparing the materials for the Temple; which was not to be built until after his death. This may to some extent have hindered his work as superior judge, so that some cases, as in every superior court, were delayed of a hearing—tediously, it seemed to those impatient for desired results.

We are not sure, however, that anything was lacking respecting King David's administration of justice. We merely know that his crafty son Absalom very graciously heard the people's complaints, and answered them very cunningly, expressing sorrow for their delay and saying, "Would that I were king! It would be different!" Thus by deception, intrigue, falsehood, he "stole the hearts of the people" from his father. The people really began to think that if Absalom were king, they would be immensely better off.

Absalom was spectacular, a beautiful prince, with long, wavy hair. He rode in his chariot, with fifty swift runners before him. The thoughtless people admired this; and at least one wise man was drawn away by the infectious infatuation of this glitter.

Absalom knew of his father's religious sentiments, which apparently he did not at all share. He realized that he would not probably be his father's choice for a successor; and that it would soon be time for a new king, as King David was aged. Following Satan's course of ambition and disloyalty to God, he became

WHY RIVERS OVERFLOW.

Some Streams Make Their Beds Too Small For Flood Tides.

"A river is not made to order. It is nothing more nor less than the accidental path made by water in following the line of least resistance," writes Arthur E. Morgan in an article on "Why Rivers Overflow," published in the Scientific American. Mr. Morgan goes on to show that the average river has found or made a channel that suffices for it in ordinary times, but that in flood tide is not large enough to carry off the water. Some of the figures he gives explain perfectly why certain rivers are in the habit of overflowing.

The Coldwater river, where it enters the flat lands from the hills in northern Mississippi, has a capacity of 900 cubic feet per second when full to the top of its banks. At maximum flood, however, 100,000 cubic feet per second pour down it, and it has to overflow.

The St. Francis river on the boundary between Arkansas and Missouri can take care of from 500 to 5,000 cubic feet per second, but in flood time it has 160,000, and the surplus must overflow. The Miami river in Ohio has a normal capacity, varying at different points from 6 per cent to 5 per cent of its maximum overflow. The Mississippi, near the mouth of the Red river, has

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, July 3.—There was some enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, but as the prices bid for old crop parcels were $\frac{1}{4}$ c per bushel below cost and $\frac{1}{8}$ c for new crop no business resulted. The local market for oats is stronger at an advance of $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ c per bushel, with a fair demand for carlots, but the trade in other lines of coarse grains is quiet.

The trade in butter is fair, but the market is easy. Cheese is weak and lower owing to the liberal receipts and the slow demand from English buyers. Eggs are fairly active and firm.

He realized that he would not probably be his father's choice for a successor; and that it would soon be time for a new king, as King David was aged. Following Satan's course of ambition and disloyalty to God, he became disloyal to his father the king. He recruited an army, proclaimed himself king, and did the matter so quickly and so thoroughly that King David and his regular army and the loyal courtiers were obliged to flee for their lives. Our lesson recounts the battle between Absalom's superior forces and King David's smaller army, which, however, were better trained soldiers. The victory came to King David. Absalom was slain, notwithstanding David's urgent request that his soldiers should not kill the young man.

A Very Important Principle.

What a contrast we have here between the man

King David.

after God's own heart and the man whom the people admired—the flashy, the ambitious, the deceitful, the intriguing, the rebellious, who sought his father's life! The man of God, notwithstanding his weaknesses, which were acknowledged and repented of, had a heart loyal to God, true as the needle to the pole; and he had a sympathetic love for his son which found expression in that notable dirge, "O Absalom, my son, my son, would God I had died for thee!"

The human will is wonderful, so that we might almost say that each boy is responsible for his own career. Our expression, a self-made man, is therefore not far wrong. This, however, does not excuse the parent whose duty it is to see that a proper child is born into the world—not merely outwardly beautiful, but conscientious, just, loyal to God and to the principles of righteousness. Nor does it excuse the parent from giving the child proper conceptions of life, proper instruction.—Proverbs 22:6.

It seems pitiful indeed, that with all the preaching and teaching of centuries, so few parents realize their obligations toward their children. So few fathers realize that they are the caretakers of their wives and their children; and that it is their duty, not only to select a noble, conscientious wife, but to place her under favorable conditions during gestation, and to assist her to keep her mind pure, loving, noble, loyal to God and to righteous principles, that their child may be well birthmarked, of noble character.

A Job Deferred.

"Ay tank Ay go across the street and get the tailor to mend my waist," drawled a Swedish foreman, showing his employer a very ragged vest.

"All right, John."

In a few minutes the Swede returned with his vest untouched.

"Aren't you going to have it mended?" asked the boss.

"Ay tank not in that shop," replied the Swede. "Ay ask him what he charge an' he say, 'Two dollar.' Then Ay ask him, 'Will you take the vest in part payment?' and he wouldn't do it."

top of its banks. At maximum flood, however, 100,000 cubic feet per second pour down it, and it has to overflow.

The St. Francis river on the boundary between Arkansas and Missouri can take care of from 500 to 5,000 cubic feet per second, but in flood time it has 100,000, and the surplus must overflow. The Miami river in Ohio has a normal capacity, varying at different points from 6 per cent to 5 per cent of its maximum overflow. The Mississippi, near the mouth of the Red river, has a normal flow of 200,000 cubic feet a second; when full to the top of its banks it can carry about 1,000,000 cubic feet. When all its tributaries are in flood it has to carry 2,500,000 cubic feet a second. As its banks are higher than the surrounding plains, these inevitably receive the overflow.

Homemade Silver Polish.

To make the best silver polisher and cleaner known, take a bottle of ammonia as sold in most grocery stores, and to this add two ounces of whiting, and just a few drops of oxalic acid. In this way you will procure for the expenditure of 15 cents as much of the best silver polish as can be purchased for $1 in most of the prominent drug stores. This same polish is so cheap when homemade that the housewife will not find it too expensive to use it in polishing all of the cutlery and also the brass doorknobs or any other bright metal fixtures about the house.—National Magazine.

A Woman's Strategy.

"I once heard of a sadly henpecked man who made friends with a mouse, and by keeping the little animal always about him he contrived to get the upper hand."

"A strange story. How long did that state of affairs continue?"

"Only a short while. The man's wife introduced a cat, and the moment the cat pounced on the mouse she pounced on her husband."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Getting Along.

"Lemme see, how old is your daughter?"

"I always have to stop and think. Anyway, she must be getting on. Yesterday I heard her contemptuously refer to the youngsters at a nearby preparatory school as a parcel of little boys."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Care Required.

"Good heavens," said the impatient friend, "are you writing yet? Does it take four pages to tell her you will see her tomorrow night?"

"No," said the weary writer. "but it takes eight pages to tell her I can't."—New York Times.

A WITTY STATESMAN.

Augustine Birrell Is Also a Popular Member of the British House.

"Recreation: Pedestrianism, golf, book-hunting." Thus "Who's Who," in its biographical notes on Mr. Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland since 1907, who, it is announced, will resign at an early date. To which might be added the genial pastime of increasing not a little the gaiety of his fellows, for Mr. Birrell, being a confirmed optimist, as he has more than once confessed, loves to look at things through rose-colored spectacles, and to seize the opportunity to enliven even the most serious situations with light-hearted witticisms and epigrams.

Men of all parties have a sincere affection for him. When Birrell is "up" in the House, lobby, smoking-rooms, and dining-rooms are at once emptied, for members are sure to hear a speech witty, informing, and eloquent.

Some of his witty sayings will live long after he is dead. It was he who on one memorable occasion referred to the House of Lords as "representing nobody but themselves, and they enjoyed the full confidence of their constituents," while in the same vein he declared that "a pension of five shillings a week was not much inducement to longevity."

And then there was his witty retort, when things were going badly with his Education Bill in 1907, to a Church dignitary who, meeting him one day, observed, "I am afraid your Bill is dead, Mr. Birrell." "Yes, it may be, my lord," was the prompt reply. "But I believe in the resurrection of the dead."

As an example of the gentle art of subtle sarcasm, it would be difficult to beat Mr. Birrell's description years ago of the Front Bench of the House of Commons. Referring to what is known as a full-dress debate, he said:

"On such occasions the House of Commons has reminded me of a great drying-ground, where all the clothes of a neighborhood may be seen fluttering in a gale of wind. There are nightgowns and shirts and petticoats so distended and distorted by the breeze as to seem the garments of a race of giants rather than of poor mortal man. Even the stockings of slim maiden when puffed out by the lawless wind assume monstrous

WARFARE BY CATAPULT

MODERN FIGHTING REVIVES METHODS OF OLD DAYS.

Advices From the Front Say Grenades

Are Being Thrown For Short Distances With a Device Invented By the Romans—Pitfalls, Fire Boats, Chain Shot, Hand Shields and Fire Used.

In these days of scientific warfare it is somewhat startling to notice how extensively hand grenades, weapons which date back to the sixteenth century, are being used. They are regarded in the present war as the best weapons for street and house-to-house fighting. A report from the front relates how our men all carry grenades, not only using them with remarkable effect in the trenches, but also in clearing villages. A couple of hand grenades thrown into a house occupied by the enemy will, says the military experts, clear it more quickly than anything else, and with far less loss of life than by the use of the bayonet.

This is not the only ancient war device, however, which is being used in the present campaign. In the course of the war Germany has reintroduced the following other old-fashioned methods of destruction: fire-boats, trench mortars, chain shot. And her example in regard to these has been promptly followed by the allies with great success, as "Eye-Witness" has frequently shown. It is also said that when the Austrians first carried Belgrade, the big guns were assisted by a huge apparatus known in ancient times as a ballista, a military engine which was used to hurl huge stones, catapult fashion, at fortifications under siege. An adaptation of the ballista is now being used, except that it throws bombs instead of stones.

Earlier in the struggle a French colonel declared that catapults such as the Romans used could be employed to hurl shells from one trench to another, and, in addition to their great execution, they would be noiseless and smokeless. Another French officer has advocated hand shields for soldiers, to be used in bayonet charges. His idea in regard to the shields has been partly carried out by some of our colonial troops, who have among their equipment a curiously-formed shovel, which they can not only utilize for digging trenches, but also when looking over the top of their "dug-outs"; for these shovels have two small holes through which they can peep while protecting the face from stray bullets with the other part of the shovel.

A strategem employed by the Scots at the Battle of Bannockburn has been frequently tried in the present war. The Scots, it will be remembered, dug numerous pits, placed pointed stakes in each, and covered them over with fallen leaves. When the English charged over the trap it was broken and they were cut to pieces. Immediately after the occupation of Brussels the Germans commandeered all the barrels in the city and sank them in the streets, it being almost impossible for cavalry to charge across these pitfalls.

When the allied line made its great stand in Flanders the Belgians cut the dykes everywhere, inundating the country and forming a natural barrier against which the most determined German charges broke down time after time. The Kaiser's soldiers sacrificed themselves by the thousand in their efforts to force the control of the canals from the allies, so as to stop the floods. Failing this, they

Visit of Miss Arnoldi Napanee.

LIEUT. AND CANADIAN FIELD COMFORTS COMMISSION

On Tuesday afternoon, the 6th in the people of Napanee and vicinity were so fortunate as to have the privilege of hearing Miss Arnoldi in town hall, on the needs of the Canadian soldier overseas, and the conditions surrounding him, also of work she and her colleague, M. Plummer are able to accomplish him through the support and generosity of men and women all over Dominion.

Miss Arnoldi, who possesses a most attractive personality, ingratiated herself at once with her audience through the very pleasing manner of her dress, many feeling as though they were being personally spoken to, she spoke so simply, and yet so convincingly, with all the charm of a refined and highly educated woman.

Having been in touch with our soldiers since the outbreak of war, untiring in the distribution of efforts at Valcartier, in England, Northern France, Miss Arnoldi has much of interest to tell, of the sincere appreciation of the men for all that is being done for them, of their cheerfulness and uncomplaining attitude under the terribly depressing and comfortably conditions of the win at Salisbury Plain, of the bravery of our men, and of the great and wonderful achievement of the Canadian at St. Julien and Langemarch April.

Many anecdotes, both grave and gay, emphasized the recital of the facts.

Miss Arnoldi, who came to Napanee under the auspices of the Daughters of the Empire, was much pleased with the undivided attention which was accorded her address by the large audience present, this being further demonstrated by a very appreciative vote of thanks tendered Miss Arnoldi by M. Madole, seconded by Mrs. Rutan, and carried by a standing vote.

As a result of the silver collection taken at the door $41.65 was handed to the speaker, and a fine parcel of socks as well, from the Daughters of the Empire and the Committee Women's Patriotic Service and I Cross Work, for which Miss Arnoldi was very grateful.

A short, but appropriate, program of patriotic music was well given, consisting of a piano solo by Miss J. E. Daly, the "Songs of the Allies" a "O Canada" being sung by a quartette composed of Mrs. J. L. Boy, Mrs. J. G. Daly, Miss Pearl Nesbitt, Miss Marion Paul and Miss Light.

The meeting closed with a very hearty rendering of the National Anthem.

The sincere thanks of the abc committee and the Daughters of the Empire are tendered all those who took part in the programme, and who by their efforts in any way contributed to the success of the afternoon.

After the meeting Miss Arnoldi, Executive of the Daughters of the Empire, and Convenors of Committee were entertained at afternoon tea Mrs. W. G. Wilson.

SAFETY FROM FIRE.

A Method For Insuring Escape From a Crowded Building.

In discussing the best means of emptying a loft or factory building of its occupants in time of fire or panic, IL. F. J. Porter, expert on safety from fire and known as the father of the fire drill, points out a method for solving the escape from a crowded building.

This method is a fire wall so arranged on a building as practically to bisect it. This wall must be continuous from cellar to roof and be provided with doorways on each floor, closed by automatic fire doors. The building must be designed with two sets of egress facilities of ample proportions, one set located on each side of the wall accessible from each floor.

No fire is at all likely to occur on both sides of this fire wall simultaneously, unless it is of incendiary origin. Should a fire occur the alarm sounds, and the occupants of the building on the side where the fire is merely have to pass through them and be perfectly safe.

A fire drill will empty either side of a building so equipped, no matter how many stories high, in a minute. The refugees remain in the safe side of the building until the fire has been put out, or they may at any time without haste use the egress facilities provided there, which would be free from smoke or fire.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

to beat Mr. Birrell's description years ago of the Front Bench of the House of Commons. Referring to what is known as a full-dress debate, he said:

"On such occasions the House of Commons has reminded me of a great drying-ground, where all the clothes of a neighborhood may be seen fluttering in a gale of wind. There are nightgowns and shirts and petticoats so distended and distorted by the breeze as to seem the garments of a race of giants rather than of poor mortal man. Even the stockings of slim maiden when puffed out by the lawless wind assume dropsical proportions. But the wind sinks, having done its task, and then the matter-of-fact washerwoman unpegs the garments, sprinkles them with water, and ruthlessly passes over them her flat-irons, and, lo and behold! these giants' robes are reduced to their familiar domestic and insignificant proportions."

Needless to say, this was in the days before Mr. Birrell dreamt that he himself would occupy a seat on the bench of honor.

No one laughed more heartily than himself when he perpetrated a "bull" in the House of Commons on a certain occasion when he was being heckled by Easie Winterton regarding a statement said to have been issued by the Chief Secretary in connection with certain industrial troubles in Dublin.

"What appeared," said Mr. Birrell, "was a wholly garbled version of what never took place."

Knitting.

Knitting is a Scotch invention of the fifteenth century. Soon after its invention a guild of stocking knitters was formed, with St. Flacre as its patron saint. Hand knitting was supplanted by machinery as early as 1580, when William Lee invented the knitting frame.

Take Life Like a Man.

It is a pitiable thing to see a young man whining over his lot in life and excusing indifference and inaction because of hard luck or some cruel fate which has put stumbling blocks in his way. No matter what your environment or what you may be called upon to go through, face life like a man, without whining. Turn your face to the sun, your back to the shadows, and look the world in the face without wincing. Make the most of your situation. See the beauties in it and not the ugly features. This is the way to improve an unfortunate environment.

The First Saw.

Talus, the Greek, is said to have invented the saw from having once found the jawbone of a snake, which he employed to cut through a small piece of wood. In early periods the trunks of trees were split into boards with wedges, and, although these deals were not always straight, they were regarded as much better suited to construction than sawed boards because they followed the grain and lasted longer and were stronger. Water mills for the purpose of sawing came into use in the fourth century.

The Office and the Man.

"The office should seek the man, you know."

"That's all right," replied the avowed aspirant, "but I gave it a fair chance, and it seemed diffident."

When the allied line made its great stand in Flanders the Belgians cut the dykes everywhere, inundating the country and forming a natural barrier against which the most determined German charges broke down time after time. The Kaiser's soldiers sacrificed themselves by the thousand in their efforts to force the control of the canals from the allies, so as to stop the floods. Failing this, they reverted to the ancient idea of fire-boats. There is no doubt that large quantities of crude oil were stored in Antwerp and forwarded to the front, from which it was concluded that the Germans intended covering the water with oil. The German plan, it was understood, was to send fire-boats into the inundated territory, which would ignite the floating oil and spread a wave of fire, which would drive the soldiers from their trenches and into easy range of artillery fire. This plan, however, not meeting with much success, the Germans set the fire-boats adrift on the River Ancre, about two miles north of Albert—doubtless in the hope that they would explode against the bridge at Aveluy and destroy a link in the allies' communications. Fortunately the design was frustrated by the French.

A Fine Distinction.

"Some of the distinctions of life are very puzzling to me," said Mrs. Gaddy. "Indeed," said Prof. Pundit; "what, for example?"

"When you write everything bad and mean in a man's life in a book for everybody to read it's biography, but when you tell the same things to a few people on a front porch it's gossip."

The Voice of Experience.

"I can't understand why married couples ever have a disagreement," she said. "I don't see why those matters can't be so adjusted that there will be no friction. Now, my husband and I understand each other thoroughly."

"Indeed!" he replied. "How long have you been married?"

"Nearly three days."

How to Prevent Loss of Dishes.

To prevent new dishes from breaking place them in a pan of hot water and set on the stove. Let the water come slowly to a boil; then remove from the stove, and when the water becomes cool takes the dishes out and wipe them. After this process you may use as hot water as you wish on them without fear of their breaking.

STELLA.

The congregation of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church held its annual strawberry festival on Dominion Day at Stella point. There was a very large attendance both in afternoon and evening. The island was honored by the presence of Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P. Cataract. All assembled round the grand stand at 3.30 p.m. W. H. Motray gave a short address, and Rev. Dr. Porter spoke on the Red Cross work. Rev. James Chamberlain introduced Dr. Edwards who gave a lengthy and very interesting patriotic address. At the close three sounding cheers were given for the British Empire.

A very severe electrical storm passed over the Island on Friday evening accompanied in some parts by a down-pour of rain. Lightning struck an completely destroyed the barn and stables on the premises of Mrs. McQuoid on the Front Road together with two valuable horses and a heifer. The horses were instantly killed in their stalls.

Mrs. McQuoid's son-in-law, Joseph Hogeboom, who has been working the farm, and T. McFern were in the barn at the time, and were both stunned. A neighbor's boy who was also in the barn, was unhurt, and managed to get the cows all out but one. The loss is heavy, but is partly covered by insurance. This is the second barn to be burned on the Front Road within ten days.

Women's Patriotic Service and Red Cross Work

A call is being sounded throughout the land, and it is from those who on account of obscurity and lowly surroundings have not been regarded as entitled to more than a passing regard, a call from the children of those unfortunate people who, by reason of their own neglect, or perhaps adverse circumstances, are unable to give these children a fair start in life, to which all children are entitled to. The spirit of brotherhood is taking possession of the hearts of the people, and is manifested in a number of ways, in trying to lighten the burden that rests upon the poor. Because of this advance in humane sentiment it is necessary that there should be wise legislation and administration, and that social work be given the status of a profession, calling for ability and special preparation. The need for systematic social work, and the value of trained service has not yet been fully recognized, consequently there has been a vast waste of effort and careless administration. Through this many worthy organizations have failed in their purpose. Every municipality should have a Social Welfare Department, under whose supervision all charity should be dispensed, in order to secure the best results, and prevent overlapping. No municipality should of itself undertake to dispense charity. One of the most important branches of social work is the Children's Aid Society, and one which is most misunderstood, for the reason that the public do not comprehend the motive and the end in view, which is the betterment of the conditions of the child, consequently lifting it to a higher plane of life, and to insure that the child shall have a chance to become a good citizen. Such is the aim and object of the Children's Aid Society of Lennox and Addington. Although handicapped by lack of equipment and funds much has been done in recent years towards making better citizens out of the unfortunate children who have come under the care of the Society. Public interest, however, is becoming awakened to the importance of this work, and in other counties the various municipalities are making grants to their local Societies to aid them in carrying on their work, which is mostly dependent on the charity of the public. At a recent meeting of the County Council of Northumberland and Durham the sum of $1,500 was voted to the Children's Aid Society of that county to aid them in their work. And in other counties similar grants have been made. Any municipality would find its money well expended by making a grant to its local society. If the readers of this article will consider the problem of the caring for the neglected and dependent children of this locality, and do their share in trying to alleviate the suffering, and help the unfortunate children, the desire of the writer will be attained, for every thinking man desires to measure up to his responsibility. In order to augment the funds of the Children's Aid Society of Lennox and Addington a sale of roses will be held during the County Fair here in September.

STELLA.

The congregation of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church held its annual strawberry festival on Dominion Day on the lawn point. There was a very large attendance both in afternoon and evening. The island was honored by the presence of Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P., of Toronto. All assembled round the bandstand at 3.30 p.m. W. H. Mouty gave a short address, and Rev. J. Porter spoke on the Red Cross work. Rev. James Cumberland then introduced Dr. Edwards who gave a lengthy and very interesting patriotic address. At the close three sounding brasses were given for the British Empire.

A very severe electrical storm passed over the island on Friday evening, accompanied in some parts by a down-pour of rain. Lightning struck and completely destroyed the barn and outhouses on the premises of Mrs. McQuoid on the Front Road together with two valuable horses and a heifer. The horses were instantly killed in their stalls.

Mrs. McQuoid's son-in-law, Joseph McQuoid, who has been working the farm, and T. McFern were in the barn at the time, and were both stunned. A neighbor's boy who was also in the barn, was unhurt, and managed to get the cows all out but one. The loss was heavy, but is partly covered by insurance. This is the second barn to be burned on the Front Road within a decade.

The tenders are up for the delivery of His Majesty's mail over Routes Nos. 1 and 2. They will close July 31st. Hugh Glenn is visiting his sister in Buffalo, N. Y.

DESERONTO ROAD

Mr. Herch Aylsworth has quite recently put a new steel roof on his barn, also Mr. Robert Dowling has a new roof of the same on his wagon house. These improvements add materially to the looks of the buildings.

Both the upper and lower schools have closed for the summer holidays. Quite a procession of teams with loads of movables passed up this road on Tuesday of last week from Odessa to the Methodist parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. Foley visited at Mr. Wm. Roache's on Sunday last with Mrs. Foley's mother.

Miss Long, a trained nurse, who is at present stopping with Mrs. Herb File has had her application accepted as trained nurse for the overseas service and expects to leave in a short time.

Mr. Tom Croan, is at the present time engaged with Mr. H. C. File.

M. C. Bogart Esq. is having his new barn shingled with steel roofing, and has otherwise made several improvements to his property.

Miss Lulu VanVlack after spending a year in Albert College, Belleville returned home on Wednesday.

A STRANGE CHARITY.

Two London Women Captured 479,000 Cats In 15 Years.

A strange story of how two elderly spinsters of London, one on a bicycle and the other on a tricycle, searched parks and alleys of the English capital and collected 479,000 stray cats in fifteen years is told in London.

The documents contained the testimony taken before Richard Westacott. Mr. Westacott sat as commissioner appointed by Surrogate Fowler to decide whether the Animal Refuge League of London, now affiliated with the Royal Society For Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, is a beneficiary of the estate of Miss Elizabeth G. Ewen.

Miss Ewen left her residuary estate, worth $300,000, to be equally divided among ten associations, all of which had to do with the care of animals. A clause directed that a tenth be given "to the cat house (Miss Kate Renning), London, England." The Animal Refuge League claimed the bequest, and so did the London Institution For Lost and Starving Cats.

Surrogate Fowler appointed the commission to settle the disputed point. At one time an attempt was made to break the will on the ground that Miss Ewen was of unsound mind, but this failed. The fact that she had been married to a bogus baron, who turned out to be Otto von Koenitz, an ex-convict, was used in the effort to prove her insane. The marriage was annulled.

Among the witnesses summoned in London were Edward George Faireholm, chief secretary to the Royal Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; Miss Elizabeth Clegg, a close friend of Miss Kate Cording, who established the Animal Refuge League, and Mrs. Zoe Constance Morgan, who was interested in cat rescue work.

Mr. Faireholm told how his society had taken over the Cording Cat home and said that the organization, backed by the King and Queen, received as high as $230,000 a year in donations. Then he related that Miss Cording had died a pauper on April 7, 1913, in an anti-vivisection hospital at Battersea. Everything she owned had been devoted to cats.

From the stories of Mrs. Morgan and Miss Clegg it developed that in 1898 Miss Cording, a woman with a small competence, bought a tricycle, attached a basket to the rear and made daily journeys from her home in Camden Town to London, where she captured cats, locked them in

MISCELLANEOUS THOUGHTS.

By Agnes Irene Cowan.

Torrents of rain pour out on mother earth,
And causeth the freshness of sweet-smelling birth.
But what in return doth creation give
To the Maker's magnanimity?—Justly live;
Thank and praise Him to length of days:
This is one of God's majestic ways.

Of all the running course of days,
Of all the beautiful sunrise and sunset rays,
Of all the verdure of nature's velvet cloak,
Of all the magnitude in God's two world's:

For these—
There sounds a louder trumpet to blow—
Worship God! Him only day and night praise!

Life is like a transient dream, tho' real,
It's one thing to see, another to feel.
Take note of supernatural scenes,
And to your soul a revelation will come.
Ofttimes it's when the whirl of the day is done,
Lessons there are on every side
For each of us to learn.
The outlook may seem narrow; in the end it's wide,
If in the right path we turn!

After the break of day,
After twilight has passed away,
To our rooms we go.

Within its walls is written peace,
For toil and labour now have ceased,
And there our thoughts we sow,
And there no one to disturb you,
Only your best Friend to woo.
He doth the wisdom instil,
Down within the soul's deep caves.
And to the surface there rises,
Thoughts that upward lift to the skies.
So within the quiet room,
Where we rest on thro' the night,
Peace reigns within her walls,
Guarded by the watch-angel's light.

Ofttimes—
Sorrow darkens the world,
Most all derived from sin;
But when sympathy and love unfurls,
There's peace and joy within!

I predict—
As inspired thus I am:
Hope dazzles in bright letters of gold,
Enlaid deep across the sky:
That wars shall cease; lasting will be peace,
In a near future day.
When God will be praised; worshipped to endless days;
When His Kingdom will come; His soldiers, the battle won;
When sin will be crushed; the travail of the poor hushed;
When men, will brothers be, forming a universal family.
Yea, it's coming! Faint not! Toil on!
The Day of Peace we'll see!

South Africans May Soon Line Up With Canadians

The latter received 20 shillings a year for putting them out of their misery. Sometimes she sent the baskets by parcel post.

When Miss Clegg was asked how many cats had been collected and put out of their misery she replied that from 1898 to the date of Miss Cording's death the two had caught 479,000. All efforts to get her to reduce the figure failed. She had her notebook with her, and in it she had kept a complete record of the work. She asserted that between Jan. 1, 1913, and the date of Miss Cording's death they had taken over 11,000 animals.

Sammy's Wisdom.

It was never a happy day for Sammy's painstaking father when his young hopeful's school report arrived.

As for Sammy himself—well, he was a philosopher.

The awful day had come once more, and father was in the lowest depths of misery.

"Sammy, Sammy," he groaned, "why is it that you are at the bottom of your class again?"

"What does it matter, father, whether I am at the top or the bottom?" queried that wise youth. "They teach the same at both ends, you know."—London Tit-Bits.

Birds of Distinction.

The crow and the bird of paradise were talking about fame.

"Why, you are so homely you are only known to the farmers," sneered the proud bird of paradise. "Now, I am so beautiful I have my feathers on the hats of the society women."

The crow laughed sardonically.

"That may be, my friend," he chuckled, "but I have my feet under their eyes."—Chicago News.

Dark Days.

There are a number of daylight darknesses recorded in history, among them being those in B. C. 295, A. D. 252, 746 and 775. There was a dark day in England in January, 1807, and another on Oct. 21, 1810. There was also a dark day in Detroit on Oct. 19, 1762. On May 19, 1780, there was such atmospheric gloom over Hartford, Conn., that the legislature adjourned for the day.

British Subs to Find Foe Invention Solves Problem

NEW YORK, July 7.—A London cable to the Tribune says:

According to famous British scientist, an Englishman has just made a discovery which will revolutionize submarine warfare. He states that the inventor is one of the members of the committee appointed by the Royal Society to deliberate on scientific problems arising from the war.

The invention is an apparatus whereby a submarine can locate another submerged submarine within a radius of twenty miles and keep in touch with it while within the radius.

If the device is successful, then henceforth British submarines will be able to run down and fight German undersea craft.

The scientist gave the story as an instance of what scientific men are able to do when attention is concentrated on war problems, predicting that within a few months, as the result of Lord Fisher's appointment as chairman of the naval inventions board which will include the cream of British scientists, new discoveries will be made which will astonish the world. This body is intended not merely to investigate inventions submitted from without, but will devote the greater part of its time to seeing what with constructive thought on its part, science is able to produce.

Holt, Morgan's Assailant, Ended His Life in Prison.

MINEOLA, L.I., July 6.—Frank Holt, the Cornell University professor, who shot J. P. Morgan in his home near Glen Cove, last Saturday, committed suicide in the jail here to-night.

While several of the jail authorities declared that Holt killed himself by climbing thru the opening at the top of his cell door and then throwing himself into the narrow court below. Holt's captor said that Holt was killed in his own cell.

There were many conflicting reports as to the manner in which Holt met his death, but it was definitely established thru Dr. Cleghorn, the jail physician, that Holt died of a fractured skull.

HEARD EXPLOSION.

Several of those about the jail said they heard an explosion, the report coming from Holt's cell. This noise, it was believed, was due to the falling of boards from the top of the cell.

Jeremiah O'Ryan, the keeper who detailed to watch Holt, said he was 15 feet away from the cell, but it was dark. Entering he found Holt's body in a pool of blood in the corner.

A thorough examination of Holt's cell failed to disclose, according to the jail authorities, any weapon or implements of any kind which Holt could have used to kill himself.

The body was taken to the morgue in Hempstead, where Dr. Cleghorn was prepared to perform an autopsy.

The autopsy is expected to dispose of a report current here immediately after the finding of Holt's body that he had been killed from the outside. This was only one of a number of reports reaching the authorities.

Forgot Her Sister.

A woman from a small town, in city to do some shopping, stepped to a clerk at the hosiery counter one of the department stores.

"Say," she said, "I want to get a pair of stockings like my sister from Kentucky bought here last August."

"I don't know your sister, and probably would not remember what she bought, even if I were acquainted with her," explained the clerk.

"You must remember my sister," insisted the customer. "She is a little heavy set woman."—Indianapolis News.

The Duke's Walk.

"To meet one in the duke's walk. This is an invitation to fight a duel in the vicinity of Holyrood house, Scotland, there is a place called a duke's walk, so called from its being the favorite promenade of the Duke of York, afterward King James. This walk is said to have been a common rendezvous for settling affairs of honor, as the site of the British museum was in England.

Revenge!

"Why are you so crazy to take me to bath? There's nothing the matter with you."

Poetically Put.

"We'd begun to think it would never come to anything," Mrs. Dove said frankly, "for Sister Sue is forty and Mr. Jenkins is forty-nine."

"But they're married at last, and the funny part of it is that they see as happy as if they hadn't been—well, what we used to call courtship for seventeen years."

"Ah, a romance of the middle ages!" Mrs. Dove's caller politely observed.

WAR TIME "AGONIES"

THE TIMES REVEALS STRANGE RECORD OF CONFLICT.

Numberless Charitable Funds, Many of Which Are Anything But Welcome to the War Office, Are Advertised in Columns of Paper—Swindlers Use War to Work on Sympathies of British Public.

The British censor has pencilled out hundreds of important events connected with the war, but discriminating readers of the Personal or "Agony" columns of the big London dailies have unfolded to them the story of the war as it is being lived by the people, and told by the advertisers in appeals to the public, tragical, comical, and ridiculously exaggerated.

The poignant grief of the soldier's wife or mother is sharply outlined in the dignified, simple statements of facts relating to the soldier's identification, asking for news from any one close at hand when he died. The petty ambitions of "society climbers" are portrayed in their efforts to "butt in" among the great folks of the army and navy, by pushing themselves into the limelight through projects designed to contribute to the comfort of the soldiers and sailors but entirely unauthorized by the officials, who, on their part, consider that the Government ought to take measures against such interference. The sordid ambitions of unscrupulous swindlers are revealed underneath the surface of some appeals, the unorganized charities of war, and the benevolent mood of the patriotic furnishing them a happy hunting ground for the exploitation of their nefarious schemes.

Lady Jellicoe, the wife of the commanding admiral of the fleet, has inserted advertisements in all the important newspapers to say that no naval man need be without warm blankets, that all he has to do is to have his commanding officer send word to her, as her supply from charitable contributions is almost inexhaustible. Yet, in the personal columns of the newspapers the appeals for money to buy blankets for soldiers and sailors are repeated with agonizing reference to the unhappy condition of the men so far from the comforts of home.

Possibly the most heart-stirring call is this:

Will you help the sorely-tried womenkind of the brave men at the front? A most urgent appeal is made for funds to carry on the unique and immensely important work of the Royal Savoy Needlework Guild, which in helping to protect the lonely womanhood of our brave soldiers against the many temptations of drink and its terrible evils. We are saving many houses from ruin and many lives from demoralization. We ask each member to take a War-Time Abstinence Pledge, and supply them with, and pay for, the work of making garments for the soldiers. Will you help to extend this double benefit to a wider degree? Send us to-day if possible a donation, large or small, or an order for garments. Our need is very pressing and every contribution will be most gratefully accepted and acknowledged. Please address Mrs. —, honorary secretary, Choir School, Savoy Place, W.C.

The Princess Mary has been, on her part, energetically collecting money for the soldiers' "comforts," one of which is recognized to be flint and steel.

Safe and Timely Investments

At no period in our experience of over a quarter of a century, have there been so many new investors in Government and Municipal debentures as during the past six or seven months.

BERNHARDT'S WHIMS.

Once Thought of Giving Up Profession and Keeping Candy Store.

Some years ago Sarah Bernhardt, the celebrated actress, prepared her tomb in Belle Isle, off the Brittany coast. For years La Divine spent her holidays there, fishing among the rocks near her home, playing tennis, going for long walks and generally living the simple life. Though she purchased the land about her house to keep out the intrusive neighbor, she could not bribe away the tourist, who came on bicycle or on foot to gaze at her original residence and sometimes stood sentinel by the hour before the door in the hope of seeing the great actress.

Her house, which was besieged, in other than the old sense, by a friendly "enemy," with camera and guide book, was a fort a few years ago. Being no longer of use to coast defence, it was dismantled and then purchased by the great Parisienne, who turned it into a summer abode. It stands four square to the winds of heaven, and its rude, creneled walls shine with yellow ochre, with which contrast the green slats of the window shutters.

Gil Blas tells the following story in regard to the theatrical debut of Sarah Bernhardt, showing how she once seriously thought of giving up the dramatic profession and keeping a candy store:

"On a certain Jan. 15 when the artists reunited in the green room of the Theatre Francais in order to do honor to the anniversary of Moliere, the young sister of Sarah, stepped on the dress of Mme. Nathalie, societaire grande dame and a person

THE MILKY WAY.

Students of the Stars Stop Appalled at This Mystery.

No man, woman or child lives but has looked upon and wondered at the Milky Way, that illimitable aggregation of stars that seems to be almost a mist, which spans the celestial sphere, and which has been called throughout the ages a thousand names by the people of all lands.

Astronomers, who in poetic verse separated heaven from earth and earth from heaven, and gave to airy nothings a local habitation and a name, who have told us of the composition of our sun and all of the planets; who have almost penetrated the mysteries of star clusters thousands of billions of miles distant, stop appalled at the mystery of mysteries, the galaxy, the Milky Way, the River of Heaven, the River of Light, the Tien Ho, or Celestial River of the far Orient, the Via Lactea of the Latins, the All Nahr of the Arabs.

If ever the morning stars sang together they must have had their first symphonies in the inexplicable river of stars called in all languages by some name expressive of our own homely words. If there is not "the smallest orb which thou beholdest but in his motion like an angel sings," what must be the quiring of the innumerable multitudes of the Milky Way, the splendid tracery of which is known even to the little children of our world?

It is not so many years since this River of Light was thought to be nebulous by the great astronomers. That is, it seemed to be an aggregation of gases in various stages of condensation.

had been threatened with death in more than a dozen anonymous letters which he has received during the last six weeks.

Just Why We Sneeze.

Sneezing may be due to one of a number of causes. A bright light will use many people to sneeze, as also pollen of certain plants, while there are few people but will sneeze in the presence of dust. When you have a cold the sneezing is due to an attempt of nature to cure you. She is trying to make you sneeze for the same purpose that she wants you to shiver—to generate heat for warming the blood and preventing you from taking more cold—to help relieve the cold you have. One does not sneeze with his nose alone, but with the entire body. During the sneeze every muscle of the body gives a jump, as it were. It goes into a sort of spasm that warms the entire system.—New York American.

Forgot Her Sister.

A woman from a small town, in the city to do some shopping, stepped up to a clerk at the hosiery counter in one of the department stores. "Say," she said, "I want to get two pairs of stockings like my sister from Kentucky bought here last August." "I don't know your sister, and I probably would not remember what she bought, even if I were acquainted with her," explained the clerk. "You must remember my sister," insisted the customer. "She is a little, pretty set woman."—Indianapolis News.

The Duke's Walk.

"To meet one in the duke's walk," is an invitation to fight a duel. In the vicinity of Holyrood house, Edinburgh, there is a place called the duke's walk, so called from its being a favorite promenade of the Duke of York, afterward King James II. His walk is said to have been the usual rendezvous for settling affairs of honor, as the site of the British museum was in England.

Revenge!

"Why are you so crazy to take mud to me? There's nothing the matter with you." "It's this way, doctor. I was brought in in a face collar and a raucous cry. And I always vowed that I could get my share of playing in the mud some day."—Louisville Courier Journal.

Poetically Put.

"We'd begun to think it would come to anything," Mrs. Dove said sadly, "for Sister Sue is forty and I'm Jenkins is forty-nine. "But they're married at last, and the funny part of it is that they seem happy as if they hadn't been—well, what we used to call courting—seventeen years." "Ah, a romance of the middle age!" Mrs. Dove's caller politely served.

ED FOR SALE.

The Agricultural Office have issued list of seed for sale by farmers in the County. This list may be had on application. A sample of each man's seed is kept, and marked with the Government Grade. All sales must be made direct between buyer and seller, as these samples are kept for reference only. To obtain this list of seed for sale, call at the Agricultural Office, or write Mr. B. Time Abstinence Pledge, and supply them with, and pay for, the work of making garments for the soldiers. Will you help to extend this double benefit to a wider degree? Send us to-day if possible a donation, large or small, or an order for garments. Our need is very pressing and every contribution will be most gratefully accepted and acknowledged. Please address Mrs. ———, honorary secretary, Choir School, Savoy Place, W.C.

The Princess Mary has been, on her part, energetically collecting money for the soldiers' "comforts," one of which is recognized to be flint and tinder lighters, that cigars and cigarettes can always be kept alight, and this sum already amounts to over $500,000. Yet additional appeals flood the columns for money to buy flint and tinder boxes for the soldiers and sailors, the collectors paying from a dollar and a quarter (the minimum charge) to five dollars for each insertion in the personal column, giving an address where the money will be gratefully received. In some cases the donors are asked to send stamped envelope if they expect an acknowledgment.

Mrs. A., the wife of an officer in a certain regiment, appeals for woollen garments, also for games and pipes. Mrs. B. advertises that she would be grateful for any comforts for the soldiers, or the money with which to buy them. Mittens, scarves, warm underclothing or the money to purchase the same comes in another appeal. Books and jig-jaws are wanted by still another lady, the wife of an officer unknown to social fame before the war. Warm pants, vests (large) shirts, cardigans, mittens, tobacco, and field-glasses come in the category of some other lady's advertised appeal. Wristlet watches, football shirts and stockings, khaki wool comforts and khaki handkerchiefs—or the money with which to buy them—these include the wants of some lady who has volunteered to receive anything that the kind hearted public will send, paying a good many dollars to the newspapers to spread abroad this fact. Mrs. X., on her part, wants the public to go down into its pockets and furnish her with one thousand raincoats—or the money for their purchase; while Mrs. Y. is collecting 1,000 khaki hose tops, or the money. A dozen other ladies want gramophones, organs, or pianos—or the money.

All of this is, however, nothing in comparison to the appeals for ambulances launched through the "Agony" column of the papers by the wife of an army officer who must have already spent in advertising the idea almost enough to start an ambulance, since the appeal is divided up into eighty sections, each under the direction of a woman whose first name is given to her division.

The Grand Drama.

"The aged actress became very angry and reproved the girl, who replied in the same language, until Sarah intervened by slapping the face of the veteran societaire of 1852.

"There was a terrible scandal, and Sarah received from the administrator, Edouard Thierry, a command publicly to apologize to Mme. Nathalie before all the societaires who had witnessed the affair.

"In her despair she wished to go into business and was tempted to purchase the good will of a candy store in the boulevards, but the gloomy aspect of the shop when she examined it deterred her.

"Soon after, with her savings almost gone, she found an engagement at the Gymnase de Montigny, where she made her first real success."

Why We Keep to the Right.

Why do we keep to the right in this country, and why do they keep to the left in Europe? The paradox of these conflicting traffic customs is brought to the attention of the manufacturer of left-hand drive automobiles every time he receives an order from Europe, because they always order a right-hand drive car.

In Europe, in the days of the spear and sword, a horseman kept to the left in meeting anyone in order that he might have his adversary, if such he proved to be, on the free or right.

In this country horseback was the first general mode of travel because of the almost impassable roads. A horseman in meeting an adversary kept to the right in order to have the enemy on the protected side, the horse's body and neck forming a shield and his own body protecting his gun arm.

Traffic custom did not become definitely crystallized until the advent of the automobile, and then in Europe the driver sat on the right side. In Europe the arrangement was all right because with the reverse traffic regulations the driver was close to the vehicles he was passing.

Belgians' Courting Customs.

In love-making the Belgians have some curious customs. In the peaceful days of Bruges an engaged couple would throw chestnuts into the fire, and if the nuts burned quietly the augury for happy relations was good, but if they "popped" or burst, then the whole disposition of the lovers' lives would be altered. Another custom was for a lover to go to the window of his beloved and fire off a pistol. The greater the number of shots the more intense his love must be. The lady was supposed to hide a bottle of Schnapps or gin in the garden for the lover to discover, but it sometimes happened that another admirer was more prompt and found it. To make sure that the bottle fell into the right hands, the lady would often lower the bottle from her window by a string.

It is not so many years since this River of Light was thought to be nebulous by the great astronomers. That is, it seemed to be an aggregation of gases in various stages of condensation.

Then came the days of the wonderful lenses, which concentrator rays of light, separating the stars of heaven and the insects of earth, and telling the children of earth that the magnificent spectacle of the galaxy is not a nebula, not a star fog, but an aggregation of suns born of utterable energy of the atomic universe, growing through eons of eons of years, the word years in that connection meaning nothing, and assembling in this glorious pathway of what are called the heavens, that word meaning nothing, the one spectacle of the outer space that is best known to all who look away in the night from the dross and scum of earth.

German Censor Spoofed.

It is a great advantage to possess a knowledge of Welsh if you happen to be a prisoner of war. Welsh prisoners of war in Germany are able to notify their friends in Great Britain more fully of the conditions of prison and internment camp life than are their English colleagues, and that without having recourse to the doubtful safeguard of invisible ink. A letter which passed the German censor, and will long be kept as a family treasure, contains the following:

"You will be glad to hear news of old friends. Mr. Bwyer (food) is very bad here. Mr. Bara (bread) is very much darker than when you saw him, and is quite hard. I never see Mr. Cig (meat), and Mr. Ymenyn (butter), but seldom; he was very bad indeed the last few times I met him. I used at first to meet Mr. Llaeth (milk) every day, but he has not been here now for some time."

The words given in brackets are the English equivalents of the Welsh word immediately preceding. The letter was written in English throughout, excepting the Welsh words, which the German censor took to be the names of other English prisoners.

And yet, such is the inconsistency of the human animal, the instinct for self-preservation was stronger than her purpose: when a touring car swung round the mountain and shot toward her, she checked herself hastily and jumped aside in ample time to escape being run down.

The next instant the machine was lurching to a halt and the sonorous accents of Seneca Trine were saluting her:

"Judith! You here! What the devil!

Where've ye been? Where are Marrophat and Jimmy?"

Digging the nails of her fingers painfully into her palms, she breathed deep, fighting down hysteria, reasserting her self-control in so short a space of time that her father failed to appreciate that there was anything uncommon in the mind of the girl.

"Where?" he demanded angrily as she approached the car, "where, I want to know, are Marrophat and Jimmy? Haven't you seen or heard anything of them? They left me at six o'clock this morning, to go after—"

"Dead!" the girl interrupted, sententious, eyeing him strangely.

"I don't believe it!" the old man screamed, aghast. "I won't believe it. You're lying to me, you jade! You're lying—"

"I am not," she broke in coldly. "I am telling you the plain truth . . . They followed us all morning in that red racer, firing at us all the while. Finally they caught up with us here, about noon—came up this road shooting over the windshield. It was our lives or theirs. We turned the hydraulic stream on them and washed the car over the cliff. If you don't believe me, get somebody to show you their faces."

She indicated with a gesture two forms that lay at a little distance back from the roadside, motionless beneath a sheet of canvas—the bodies of Trine's creatures, recovered by the mining gang and brought up for a Christian burial.

But Trine required no more confirmation of Judith's word. The light flickered and died in his evil old eyes; his stricken countenance assumed a hue of pallor even more intense than was normal with it; a broken curse issued from his trembling, thin, old lips; and his chin sagged to his chest, heavy-weighted with despair that followed realization of the fact that he no longer owned even one friend or creature upon whose conscienceless loyalty he might depend.

The last bitter drop that brimmed his cup of misery was added when Alan Law himself appeared, leaving the miners' cabin in company with his betrothed—Rose now soothed and comforted, smiling through the traces of her recent tears as she clung to her lover, nestling in the hollow of his arm.

Without the least warning his left hand closed upon the weapon, withdrew it and leveled it at the back of Alan's head.

As he pulled the trigger Judith flung herself bodily upon the arm.

Even so, the bullet found a goal, though in another than the intended victim. The muscular forearm of the chauffeur received it.

With a shriek of pain the man released the wheel and grasped his arm.

Before Alan could move to prevent the disaster the car, running without a guiding hand, caromed off a low embankment to the left and shot full-tilt into a shallow ditch on the right, shelling its passengers like peas from a broken pod.

Alan catapulted a good twenty feet through the air and alighted with such force that he lay stunned for several moments.

When he came to, he found Barcus helping him to his feet; a heavy seven-passenger touring car halted in the roadway indicated the manner in which his friend had arrived on the scene of the accident.

When damages were assessed it was found that none of the party had suffered seriously but the chauffeur and Seneca Trine himself. The former had only his wound to show however, while Trine lay rill and senseless at a very considerable distance from the wrecked automobile.

Nothing but a barely perceptible respiration and intermittently fluttering pulse persuaded them that the flame of life was not extinct in that poor, old, pain-racked body.

CHAPTER LIV.

The Last Trump.

Toward the evening of the third day following the motor spill, Judith sat in the deeply recessed window of a bedchamber on the second floor of a hotel situated in the heart of California's orange-growing lands.

Behind her Seneca Trine sat, apparently asleep, in a wheeled invalid chair.

There was no occupant of the room.

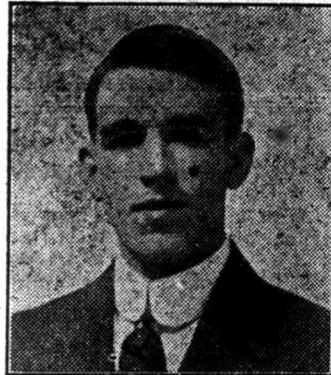

Though he had lain nearly two days in coma, her father's subsequent progress toward recovery of his normal state had been rapid. Now, according to a council of surgeons and physicians who had been summoned to deliberate on his case, he was in a fair way to round out the average span of a sound man's lifetime. He had apparently suffered nothing in consequence of his accident more serious than prolonged unconsciousness. For the last twenty-four hours he had been in full possession of his faculties and (for some reason impossible to Judith to fathom) uncommonly cheerful.

From this circumstance she drew

Constructed in imitation of an old Spanish mission chapel, it contained one of the finest organs in the world; at this close range its deep-throated tones vied with the warnings of the storm. Judith, lurking in a passageway whose open door revealed the altar steps and chancel, was shaken to the very marrow of her being by the majestic reverberations of the music.

Since they had regained contact with civilization in a section of the country where the Law estate had vast holdings of land, the chapel was thronged with men and women who had known Alan's father and wished to honor his son.

Above stairs, in the room Judith had quitted, Seneca Trine opened both eyes wide and laughed a silent laugh of savage triumph when the door closed behind his daughter.

At last he was left to his own devices—and at a time the most fitting imaginable for what he had in mind.

With a grin, Seneca Trine raised both arms and stretched them wide apart.

Then, grasping the arms of his chair, he lifted himself from it and stood trembling upon his own feet for the first time in almost twenty years.

Grasping the back of the wheeled chair, he used it as a crutch to guide his feeble and uncertain movements. But these became momentarily

And as the way opened and he looked up toward the altar and saw Alan standing hand in hand with Rose while the minister invoked blessing upon the union that had been but that instant cemented, added strength, the strength of the insane was given to Seneca Trine.

When Alan, annoyed by the disturbance in the body of the chapel looked round, it was to see the age-maniac standing within a dozen feet of him; and as he looked and cried out in wonder, Trine whipped a revolver from the pocket of his dressing gown and swung it steadily to bear upon Alan's head.

At that instant the storm broke with infernal fury upon the land.

A crash of thunder so heavy and prolonged that it seemed to rock the very building upon its foundations accompanied the shattering of a huge stained-glass window.

A bolt of bluish flame of dazzling brilliance slashed through the window like a flaming sword and smote the pistol in the hand of Seneca Trine discharging the weapon even as struck him dead.

As he fell the bolt swerved and struck two others down—Alan Law and the woman who had just been made his wife.

CHAPTER LIV.

The Wife.

Again three days elapsed; and Judith, returning from the double funeral of her father and sister, doffed her mourning for a gown less sombre and more suited to the atmosphere of a sickroom, then relieved the nurse in charge of Alan.

He remained as he had been ever since the falling of the thunderbolt in absolute coma.

But he lived, and—or the physician lied—must soon regain consciousness. Kneeling beside his bedside Judith prayed long and earnestly.

When she arose it was to answer a tap upon the door. She admitted Tom Barcus and suffered him to lead her into the recess of the window where they conversed in guarded tones in spite of the fact that the subject of their communications could not possibly have heard them.

"I've come to tell you something, Barcus announced with characteristic awkwardness, 'I've known it for three days—ever since the wedding in fact—and kept it to myself, no knowing whether I ought to tell you yet or not.'"

He paused, eyeing her uncertainly unhappily.

"I am prepared," Judith assured him calmly.

"You're nothing of the sort," he countered, argumentative. "You couldn't be. It's the most amazing thing imaginable. . . . See here . . . 'Well?'"

"You understand, don't you, the Alan must never know that Rose was killed by that lightning stroke?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean," the man floundered miserably, "you see, he loved her so—thought—I'm sure it would be best if you can bring yourself to it—to let him go on believing it wasn't Rose who was killed, but Judith. And that's skating so close to the truth that it makes no difference: the Judith Alan knew and the Judith I knew in the beginning is gone as completely as though she and not Rose had been . . ."

from his trembling, thin, old lips; and his chin sagged to his chest, heavy-weighted with despair that followed realization of the fact that he no longer owned even one friend or creature upon whose conscienceless loyalty he might depend.

The last bitter drop that brimmed his cup of misery was added when Alan Law himself appeared, leaving the miners' cabin in company with his betrothed—Rose now soothed and comforted, smiling through the traces of her recent tears as she clung to her lover, nestling in the hollow of his arm.

To Alan, on the other hand, this rencontre seemed to afford nothing but the pleasantest surprise imaginable.

"Well!" he cried, releasing Rose and running down to the car. "Here's luck! And at the very moment when I was calling my lucky star hard names! How can I ever reward your thoughtfulness, Mr. Trine? It beats me how you do keep track of me this way—happening along like this every time I need a car the worst way in the world!"

"Drive on!" Trine screamed to the chauffeur. "Drive on, do you hear?"

But Judith had stepped up on the running board and was eyeing the driver coldly, with one hand significantly resting on the butt of the weapon at her side. The car remained at a standstill.

Sulphurous profanity followed, a pungent stream of vituperation that was checked only by Judith's interruption: "We've had to gag you once before, you know. If you want another taste of that—keep on!"

"But where's Barcus?" Judith demanded when, after helping Rose into the car and running off to thank their hosts, Alan returned alone to the car.

"Goodness only knows," the young man answered cheerfully. "He would insist on rambling off down the canyon in search of an alleged town where we could hire a motor car—somewhere down there. I tried to make him understand that we had plenty of time, but he was mulish as he generally is when he gets a foolish notion into his head. So I daresay we'll meet him on his way back—or else asleep somewhere by the roadside!"

Taking the seat next to the chauffeur, he gave the word to drive on; and they slipped away from the location of the mining camp, saluted by cheers from the miners.

The road dipped sharply down the mountainside to the bed of the canyon. The car moved smoothly and swiftly, coasting; only now and then was it necessary to call upon the engine for power with which to negotiate an upgrade or some uncommonly long stretch of level road.

Half an hour passed without a word spoken by any member of the party. Each was deep in his or her own especial preoccupation: Alan turning over plans for an early wedding; Rose hugging the contentment regained through her lover's protestations; Judith lost in profoundest melancholy; Trine nursing his rage, working himself up into a silent fury whose consequences were to be more far-reaching than even he dreamed in his wildest moments.

Its first development, for all that, was desperate enough.

The aged monomaniac occupied the right-hand corner of the rear seat. Thus his one able hand was next to Judith, in close juxtaposition to the progress toward recovery of his normal state had been rapid. Now, according to a council of surgeons and physicians who had been summoned to deliberate on his case, he was in a fair way to round out the average span of a sound man's lifetime. He had apparently suffered nothing in consequence of his accident more serious than prolonged unconsciousness. For the last twenty-four hours he had been in full possession of his faculties and (for some reason impossible to Judith to fathom) uncommonly cheerful.

From this circumstance she drew a certain sense of mystified anxiety. Twice in the course of the morning she had caught his eye following her with a gleam of sardonic exultancy, as though he nursed some secret of extraordinary potentialities.

And yet (she argued) it was quite impossible that he should have some fresh scheme brewing for the assassination of Alan. Not a soul had had any sort of communication with him since his recovery but the attending surgeon, a man of unimpeachable character, a meek-mannered trained nurse, and herself, Judith. Under such circumstances he simply could not have set a new conspiracy afoot.

And yet . . . She was oppressed by a great uneasiness.

Perhaps (she reasoned) the weather was responsible for this feeling, in some measure at least. The day had been unconsciously hot, a day without a breath of air. Now, as it drew toward its close, its heat seemed to become more and more oppressive even as its light was darkened by a portentous phenomenon—a vast pall of inky cloud shouldering up over the mountains to the music of distant rumblings.

Nor was this all; a considerable degree of restlessness was surely pardonable in one who, from her window, watched a carriage-drive populous with vehicles (for the most part motor cars) bringing to the hotel gayly dressed men and women, the guests invited to the wedding of Rose Trine and Alan Law.

Within another ten minutes the man Judith loved with all her body and soul would be the husband of her sister.

She had told herself she was resigned; but she was not, and she would never be. Her heart was breaking in her bosom as she sat there, watching, waiting, listening to the ever heavier detonations of the approaching thunderstorm and to the jubilant pealing of a great organ down below.

The had told herself that, though resigned, she could not bear to witness the ceremony. Now as the moment drew near when the marriage would be a thing finished, fixed, irretrievable, she found herself unable to endure the strain alone.

Slowly, against her will, she rose and stole across the floor to her father's chair.

His breathing was slow and regular; beyond doubt he slept; unquestionably there was no reason why she should not leave him for ten minutes; even though he waked it could not harm him to await her return at the end of that scant period.

Like a guilty thing, on feet as noiseless as any sneak thief's, she crept from the room, closed the door silently, ran down the hall and descended by a back way, a little-used staircase, to the lower hall, approaching the scene of the marriage.

laugh of savage triumph when the door closed behind his daughter.

At last he was left to his own devices—and at a time the most fitting imaginable for what he had in mind.

With a grin, Seneca Trine raised both arms and stretched them wide apart.

Then, grasping the arms of his chair, he lifted himself from it and stood trembling upon his own feet for the first time in almost twenty years.

Grasping the back of the wheeled chair, he used it as a crutch to guide his feeble and uncertain movements. But these became momentarily stronger and more confident.

This, then, was the secret he had hugged to his embittered bosom, a secret unsuspected even by the attending surgeon; that through the motor accident three days ago he had regained the use of limbs that had been stricken motionless—strangely enough, by a motor car—nearly two decades since.

Slowly but surely moving to the bureau in the room, he opened one of its drawers and took out something he had, without her knowledge, seen Judith put away there while she thought he slept.

Then, with this hidden in the pocket of his dressing gown he steered a straight if very deliberate course to the door, let himself out, and like a materialized specter of the man he once had been, navigated the corridor to the head of the broad central staircase and step by step, clinging with both hands, negotiated the descent.

The lobby of the hotel was deserted. As the ceremony approached its end every guest and servant in the house was crowding the doorway to the chapel. None opposed the progress of this ghastly vision in dressing gown and slippers, chuckling insanely to himself as he tottered through the empty halls and corridors, finding an almost supernatural strength to sustain him till he found himself face to face with his chosen enemy and victim.

The first that blocked his way into the chapel, a bellboy of the hotel, looked round at the first touch of the claw-like hand upon his shoulder and shrank back with a cry of terror—a cry that was echoed from half a dozen throats within another instant.

As if from the path of some grisly visitant from the world beyond the grave, the throng pressed back and cleared a way for Seneca Trine, father of the bride.

"You understand, don't you, that Alan must never know that Rose was killed by that lightning stroke?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean," the man floundered miserably, "you see, he loved her so—thought—I'm sure it would be best if you can bring yourself to it—to him go on believing it wasn't Rose who was killed, but Judith. And the skating so close to the truth that makes no difference: the Judith Alan knew and the Judith I knew in the beginning is gone as completely though she and not Rose had been killed."

After a long pause, the girl asked him quietly: "I understand. But is it possible you don't understand that if I were to consent to this proposition, lend myself to a deception which I must maintain through all my life to come—Alan would consider me a wife?"

"Well, but—you see—you are his wife. . . . Oh, don't think I'm off my head. I'm telling you the plain, unvarnished truth. You are Alan's wife. . . . No, listen to me. You remember that day in New York when you substituted for Rose, when Alan tried to elope with her, and you went with him to Jersey City, and stood up to be married by a preacher-guy named Wright—and Marrophat broke in just at the critical moment and busted the party?"

"Well?" she demanded breathlessly. Barcus produced a folded yellow paper from his coat pocket and perused it.

"Read that. It was handed to me as best man, just before the ceremony. Seeing it was addressed to Alan and knowing he was in no frame of mind to be bothered by telegrams, I slipped it into my pocket and forgot all about it temporarily. When I came to find it, I took the liberty of reading it. But read it for yourself!"

The typewritten lines of the long message blurred and ran together, most indecipherably in Judith's vision. None the less, she contrived to grasp the substance of its meaning.

"WHY DIDN'T YOU WIRE ME SOONER," it ran: "MARRIAGE TO ROSE IMPOSSIBLE. REV. M. WRIGHT INFORMED ME YOU MARRIED TO JUDITH LAW. WEEK HAD GONE TOO FAR WHEN MARROPHAT INTERRUPTED. JUDITH LEGALLY YOUR WIFE. WOULD HAVE ADVISED YOU SOONER HAD YOU LET ME KNOW WHERE TO ADDRESS YOU. HOW

Lightning Kills Trine and Strikes Down Alan and Rose.

And as the way opened and he looked up toward the altar and saw Alan standing hand in hand with those while the minister invoked a blessing upon the union that had been cut that instant cemented, added strength, the strength of the insane, was given to Seneca Trine.

When Alan, annoyed by the disturbance in the body of the chapel, looked round, it was to see the aged maniac standing within a dozen feet of him; and as he looked and cried out in wonder, Trine whipped a revolver from the pocket of his dressing gown and swung it steadily to bear upon Alan's head.

At that instant the storm broke with infernal fury upon the land.

A crash of thunder so heavy and prolonged that it seemed to rock the very building upon its foundations, accompanied the shattering of a huge stained-glass window.

A bolt of bluish flame of dazzling brilliance slashed through the window like a flaming sword and smote the mistol in the hand of Seneca Trine, discharging the weapon even as it struck him dead.

As he fell the bolt swerved and struck two others down—Alan Law and the woman who had just been made his wife.

CHAPTER LIV.

The Wife.

Again three days elapsed; and Judith, returning from the double funeral of her father and sister, doffed her mourning for a gown less somber and more suited to the atmosphere of a sickroom, then relieved the nurse of a charge of Alan.

He remained as he had been ever since the falling of the thunderbolt—an absolute coma.

But he lived, and—or the physicians said—must soon regain consciousness. Kneeling beside his bedside Judith prayed long and earnestly.

When she arose it was to answer tap upon the door. She admitted Tom Barcus and suffered him to lead her into the recess of the window, where they conversed in guarded tones in spite of the fact that the subject of their communications could not possibly have heard them.

"I've come to tell you something," Barcus announced with characteristic awkwardness, "I've known it for three days—ever since the wedding, in fact—and kept it to myself, not knowing whether I ought to tell you or not."

He paused, eyeing her uncertainly, nappily.

"I am prepared," Judith assured him calmly.

"You're nothing of the sort," he countered, argumentative. "You couldn't be. It's the most amazing thing imaginable. . . . See here . . ."

"Well?"

"You understand, don't you, that Alan must never know that Rose was killed by that lightning stroke?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean," the man floundered miserably, "you see, he loved her so—I thought—I'm sure it would be best—you can bring yourself to it—to let him go on believing it wasn't Rose who was killed, but Judith. And that's eating so close to the truth that it makes no difference: the Judith Alan knew and the Judith I knew in the beginning is gone as completely as though she and not Rose had been killed."

TO HEAVEN THIS GETS TO YOU BEFORE TOO LATE."

The message was signed with the name of Alan's confidential man of business in New York.

When Judith looked up she was alone in the room, but for the silent patient on his couch.

Slowly, almost fearfully, she crept to his bedside and stood looking down into the face of her husband.

And while she looked Alan's lashes fluttered, his respiration quickened, a faint color crept into his pallid cheeks—and his eyes opened wide and looked into hers.

His lips moved and breathed a word of recognition:

"Judith!"

With a low cry of tenderness, the girl sank to her knees and encircled his head with her arms.

"Judith," she whispered, hiding her face in his bosom, "Judith is no more . . ."

A pause; and then the feeble voice:

"Then, if I was mistaken, if you aren't Judith, you must be Rose—my wife!"

She said steadily: "I am your wife." His hands fumbled with her face, closed upon her cheeks, lifted her head until her eyes must look into his.

And for many minutes he held her so, looking deep into the soul of the woman.

Then quietly he said: "I know . . ."

THE END.

FALLING A MILE.

Curious Effect of Dropping Rocks Down a Deep Mine Shaft.

In reference to the deep mine shafts at Calumet some experiments conducted by members of the faculty of the Michigan College of Mines are interesting. It had been noticed that in the vertical shafts at the Tamarack mine if some ore or rock were spilled near the surface men working in the bottom of the shaft a mile below were not much bothered and sometimes only observed "a little dust." It is stated that a car of broken rock could be dumped into the shaft without injury to a man standing directly underneath a mile down.

The reason is that the rock would never reach the bottom, but would lodge in the sides of the shaft on the timbers that protrude a few inches at intervals—that is, the rock would not fall straight, since these shafts are exactly vertical.

In the experiments conducted two round metal balls were dropped into the center of a shaft by burning threads by which they were suspended, so as to give them no lateral motion. It was tried to catch the balls in a box of clay in the bottom of the shaft. None of them was caught. One ball was never found afterward. The other was found in the east wall of the shaft only a few hundred feet below the surface.

The explanation is that the earth is revolving from west to east, which gave the ball an eastward component in its fall because a particle on the surface of the earth is traveling at a higher rate of speed than one nearer the center, although at the same angular velocity. Thus a ball or rock dropped in the shaft will strike the east wall a few hundred feet from the surface, possibly then rebounding several times in its drop until it lodges on a timber or on a level.—Engineering Magazine.

DIRECTING A BATTLE.

How the General Staff Keeps in Touch With the Firing Line.

In wartime the many threads leading from the long battle line at length reach a common point, which is the headquarters of the general staff. The activity of each officer attached to the general staff is therefore of the greatest importance for the success of every military enterprise.

During the action every officer of the staff is at the immediate disposal of the commanding general and assists him in the carrying out of orders.

Among the duties of the staff officer during action belong the gathering and compilation of reports which are constantly pouring in to headquarters and which give intimation of the progress of the battle. The staff officer must observe the needs of the troops in action. He must keep a close watch on their supply of ammunition. He must see that their commanders properly execute the orders of the commanding general. He must look after the wounded, see that they are properly treated and sent to lazarets. He must see to it that prisoners are properly cared for and that the commissariat is adequately provided for and the provisioning of the troops.

Sometimes the commanding general intrusts a staff officer with the observa-

tary submission to discipline. But Turkish officers know better than to touch their men rudely or even to shout at them.

Of course it was a very regrettable misunderstanding, and the sultan sent a telegram to the kaiser to express his sorrow, and an Imperial Ottoman prince and three Turkish ministers followed the victim's hearse to the cemetery. But in the interests of discipline the murderer had to die despite an appeal for a reprieve from the colonel's widow.

The Albanian was shot by ten men of his own battalion, and when he was asked before the execution if he repented of the deed he replied twice in a firm voice, "No!"—Washington Star.

THE FREEZING OF LIGHT.

Radium Rays Congeal at a Temperature of Minus 312 Degrees.

The world stood with gaping mouth and baited breath when science announced the phenomenon of frozen air, but wonderment has probably reached its limit when one learns that such an intangible and weightless thing as light has been frozen.

It is customary to speak of the enormous generative power of heat, but more astounding still is the fact that by means of cold a force may be imprisoned and retained which when liberated traverses space at a velocity of 186,000 miles per second.

Like all great discoveries, the process is exceedingly simple and based upon formulas that one marvels at not having been employed long ago. Radium emits light which is called "emanation," and this "emanation" is nothing more or less than a gas. It is possible to freeze all gases, and when "emanation" is subjected to a temperature of 312 degrees below zero it becomes congealed.

The strangest feature of the phenomenon, however, is to be observed when the "emanation" commences to thaw, when from the surface of the surrounding liquid air brilliant spangles of light stream upward, producing a most beautiful and dazzling effect.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

An Appeal to Vanity.

A Mussulman general gained a victory over the Greeks and captured their leader. Having summoned the prisoner into his tent, he asked him what treatment he expected from his conqueror. "If you make war like a king," replied the Greek, "release me; if you make it like a trader, sell me; if you make it like a butcher, slaughter me." The Mussulman general set him free.

Abram-man.

It was at one time the practice to allow the inmates of the Abraham ward of Bethlehem hospital, London, to go about begging for the benefit of the hospital. Certain vagrants imposed on the charitably inclined by pretending to be actual inmates and were therefore known as Abram-men; hence the term Abram-man, one who obtains money by shamming sickness.—London Express.

He must see to it that prisoners are properly cared for and that the commissariat is adequately provided for and the provisioning of the troops.

Sometimes the commanding general intrusts a staff officer with the observation of the action of the opposing forces which may be beyond the view of headquarters, or he may be sent to the firing line with important orders to commanders there, which, however, the staff officer has authority to alter if in his judgment this is necessary.

During defense movements it is of particular importance to observe closely the movements of the opposing forces in order to make preparation for counted moves, such as advances, retreats, the sending of re-enforcements and other movements of troops. The execution of these movements falls within the province of the staff officer.

The training of the staff officer is very thorough. A complete practical course in military science, extending over many years' of active service with various bodies of troops, is augmented by years of study at the war college, which embraces the last word in the theoretical science of modern warfare.—New York Tribune.

Some years ago the German Colonel von Schlechting, instructor to the Ottoman army, was shot dead on parade at Yildiz kiosk by a young Albanian soldier, Hadji Balram, because the German in correcting the faulty pose of the soldier's head touched his chin with his riding whip.

Unfortunately the colonel did not know or did not remember that to touch a Mussulman's chin is a grave offense from a religious viewpoint. It is by the beard of the prophet or his own beard that he swears allegiance and makes his vows and promises. According to a Turkish general, an Albanian would kill his own father if he laid hands upon his son's head in so disrespectful a manner. A Mohammedan military service is simply a religious duty, and it implies a volun-

RADIUM AND THE FARM.

Reports of the so called "discovery" that certain minerals containing radium are of great value as fertilizers have been attracting a lot of attention in the newspapers. A report just issued by the Illinois experiment station on a series of field tests covering two seasons summarizes the results in the following positive terms:

"The trustworthy results from two years of field trials by the Illinois experiment station show that radium applied at a cost of $1. $10 or $100 per acre produced no effect upon the crop yields either the first or the second season."

Though earlier investigations have shown that radium may have an influence upon the growth of plants, it appears that the results secured by using uranium-radium ore in growing crops are so slight as to be of negligible importance. Variations in yields due to season, rainfall and the like were much greater than could possibly be traced to the radium.—Country Gentleman.

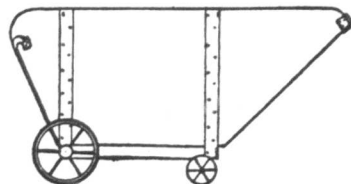

seeding in corn at the last cultivation has been successful. When red clover is seeded on winter grain it is sown broadcast early in the spring when the ground is honeycombed by freezing and thawing. If sown later when the ground can be worked it is broadcasted and harrowed in or seeded as shallow as possible with a disk drill. In the spring grain sections red clover is sown at the same time the grain is drilled. It is the practice in some locations to attach a grass seeding attachment to the grain drill and drop the clover seed either in front or behind the grain hose. If dropped in front of the grain hose the drill will cover it, but if dropped behind it should be harrowed in. Care should be taken to see that the seed is covered about an inch in loam soils and half an inch in clay soils. It is important that the seed be well covered so that the young plants will have sufficient moisture to become established. It is recommended on soils which are poor in humus to apply a dressing of straw or manure to the winter wheat. This will help to control washing and packing as well as the loss of moisture. It may be the means of establishing a stand which would otherwise fail. Eight to ten pounds of seed are usually sown to the acre.

Red clover should be cut for hay when just past full bloom. At this stage the maximum protein and dry matter are present, the leaves are still intact and the stems green. The hay should be so handled that it will reach the barn or stack with the least possible exposure to the weather and loss of leaves. It should not be allowed to become too dry in the windrow and should be cured in the shock. The second crop of clover may be cut for hay, pastured or allowed to mature for seed. If a seed crop is to be harvested it should be cut when nearly all of the heads have turned brown or black. The mower, self rake reaper or binder may be used to cut the crop. When the mower is used the hay should be raked and bunched while damp to prevent shattering. It should not be tied in bundles when the binder is used.

Convenient Silage Truck.

The silage truck shown by the accompanying drawing has paid for its cost in one month, saving steps and the carrying of heavy baskets, says a correspondent of the Farm Home. I made it myself. The cash outlay was for lumber, wheels and axle. One inch yellow pine was used for the body, as this does not absorb moisture and is smooth, permitting the scoop to slide easily when removing the silage.

The body is seventy inches on top and thirty-four inches long at the bottom; the long or front end is thirty-three inches high and rear end twenty-four inches high. The truck is twenty-six inches high and twenty-eight inches wide, all outside measurements.

Sides and ends are bound with 1 by 4 inch strips, and the top corners are reinforced with two inch irons. The frame on which the box rests is made of 2 by 4 lumber.

CULTIVATE YOUR ORCHARDS.

You should get into the habit of cultivating your orchard. It may not be the style in your neighborhood, but you can feel that you are introducing a new fashion that is meeting with the approval of most of the best fruit growers. Just remember that trees need feeding also. Nitrogen fertilizer produces luxuriant growth; potash, strength of wood and vigor, and phosphates assist in fruiting. If your orchard grows very rank with soft, brittle new wood it does not need nitrogen, but does need potash, and if it refuses to set fruit it needs phosphate. Slow growing, scraggly trees that set an enormous lot of fruit that grows ill shaped and small need a good dressing of nitrogen. Barnyard manure contains some of all of these properties, with nitrogen in excess of the others, but it is about the best fertilizer to be used where the orchard is normal or where the lack of nitrogen is evident.—L. H. Cobb, Dunavant, Kan.

TO GROW TOMATOES.

Characteristic of the Good Plant is a Strong and Extensive Root.

Many growers of late tomatoes for canning purposes underestimate the importance of good plants for setting, says a bulletin recently issued by the New Jersey State College of Agriculture.

"Under ideal weather and soil conditions very small and weak plants will live," the bulletin continues, "but the experience of several years past in some parts of New Jersey has shown that such conditions are not apt to prevail; hence, in dry seasons and always in northerly localities where re-planting is likely to give too late a crop, the strength of the first plants set is an all important point. Some planters prefer to run the risk of losing plants, with the intention of re-planting such as are lost, rather than to take a little extra care in producing sets of the best kind. In the un-

How It Is Managed in the German Capital.

THE FAMILY RENT GROUND

The Garden Produces All the Vegetables That They Require, Tended It is by the Entire Flock—German Girl Trained in Domestic Science.

This is the way of it. They take street car to a vacant lot on the outskirts of the city, and they rent a patch of ground for about 20 marks a year and build a little house. Father directs the nails, and the children pass them and mother holds the board in place.

Nobody in Germany ever hires a thing done that he or she can do himself or herself. The house consists of one very small room with a stove in one corner and a shelf to keep the plates on. And there is a little tiled porch that will be sure to be run around with roses. Outside they plant a tree or a flowering shrub in place beneath it the table and bench and the three chairs for "quiet corner." The little house is of course, large enough to be used for sleeping purposes. But it does well for light daytime housekeeping.

The family spend the day in the lot of doors, returning to their city apartment at night. Mother brings the children and comes here to sew in the afternoon. Father comes directly from work, and they have supper, and afterward they make the garden. Through the long, lovely Berlin summer evenings they tend it with German loving care.

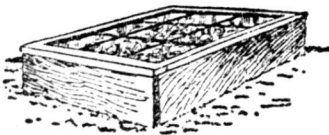

The outskirts of Berlin are covered with the Lauben Kolonie in picturesque profusion, so that almost literally every vacant lot is planted with family all of the summer vegetables and some for winter. There are the eggs from chickens. There must be the chickens, else what should be done with the waste leaves that have two applications are usually sufficient. The objection to this method is that the wounds do not heal readily unless the grubs are removed.

These measures may not be practicable in the case of large herds of half wild cattle, as it is necessary to bring the animals into close quarters in small pens or chutes. In the case of small herds the removal and destruction of the grubs are an easy task. The flies do not migrate far and often the cleaning up of individual herds and the care of animals brought to the premises will control the pest.

The Christmas Rose.

Helleborus, or Christmas rose, is a valuable, hardy plant, flowering freely in the early spring, when flowers are scarce. The flowers are two or three inches across. Hellebores thrive in almost any garden soil, but a rich loam, with a moist, rather shady, perfectly drained situation, suits them best. Protected by cold frames, the plants will flower at Christmas time, from which fact their common name is derived. The roots may be lifted from the garden in the early winter or late autumn, potted and placed in gentle heat, under glass, but they should not be forced much. The best flowers will be obtained by giving the plants in the open ground the protection of a hand glass or cold frame.

Best Way to Plant Trees.

When setting out fruit trees, if the best possible results are desired dig the holes fully three feet deep and twice the diameter required by the roots. Mix the dirt that was removed thoroughly with manure, using half as much manure as soil. Fill up the hole with this compound so that the trees will not be planted deeper than they were in the nursery. Over this mixture spread a little soil so the roots will not come in direct contact with manure. Set the tree and cover the roots with soil that has not been mixed with fertilizer. After the roots are covered fill the space with the mixture. Before setting the tree a pailful or two of water should be used, and a pailful or two after the tree is set will settle the soil and keep it moist so the tree will be sure to start. Stamp the dirt well about the roots before applying the last pail of water.

This is considerable work, but it will be forgotten very soon. Trees planted like this will thrive and be a lifelong satisfaction, a reminder that what is worth doing is worth doing well.

SEEDING RED CLOVER.

Eight to Ten Pounds of Seed Are Usually Sown to the Acre.

[Prepared by the United States department of agriculture.]

Red clover has been justly ranked as the principal foundation of a permanent system of agriculture in the northern and eastern parts of the United States.

In the greater part of the clover belt clover is seeded in the spring on winter wheat or with spring grain. In the southern part of the clover belt four inches high. The truck is twenty-six inches high and twenty-eight inches wide, all outside measurements.

Sides and ends are bound with 1 by 4 inch strips, and the top corners are reinforced with two inch irons. The frame on which the box rests is made of 2 by 4 lumber.

The rear wheels are fourteen inches in diameter and were cast at a local foundry. A one and one-eighth inch axle thirty-six inches long is used, and a six inch swivel wheel is used in front. This permits the truck to be turned easily in any direction.

The truck holds enough silage for twenty-five to thirty head of stock and is very easily moved about on a moderately smooth floor while loaded.

HARDY HEDGES.

Hedges, old or new, should be attended to early. Next to the lawn, hedges are the most essential landscape feature. For most purposes nothing is superior to the popular barberry. It is absolutely hardy, requires little attention or pruning and, although deciduous, is attractive at all seasons of the year. California privet is desirable for a more formal hedge, as it can be trimmed to any desired shape. The Osage orange is good for a business hedge on the farm.

On rough banks and stony places, where something hardy and good as a ground coverer is wanted, nothing is better than the rugosa rose. There are a number of varieties, some with very pretty flowers and with particularly healthy dark green foliage, that resist the attacks of disease and insects alike.

In setting out a new hedge dig a narrow trench deep enough so some manure may be mixed with the soil at the bottom and set the plants eight to twenty-four inches apart, according to variety and age. Privet and boxwood hedges should be trimmed in the spring, and to obtain a good smooth surface or face they should be trimmed often during the summer.—Country Gentleman.

MARKET GARDENING.

Have you tried Swiss chard? It is a most excellent greens and of easy culture. Sow early and thin to about eight inches apart in the row. It is also good for poultry, and an enormous amount may be grown in a small area.

Why grow string bush beans when the stringless varieties are just as productive and much better in quality?

Lazy wife pole bean is an unusually good variety. The quality is above the average. The beans may be eaten in a green state or allowed to mature. It is one of our best standard varieties of pole beans.

It pays to give the empty plant boxes good care. They should be stored under cover until wanted again next winter.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the importance of thorough soil preparation for any crop and especially for vegetables. No gardener should plant any crop until the soil is in a thoroughly fine state of cultivation.—National Stockman and Farmer.

the business continues, "but the experience of several years past in some parts of New Jersey has shown that such conditions are not apt to prevail; hence, in dry seasons and always in northerly localities where replanting is likely to give too late a crop, the strength of the first plants set is an all important point. Some planters prefer to run the risk of losing plants, with the intention of replanting such as are lost, rather than to take a little extra care in producing sets of the best kind. In the unusual season, such as that of 1914, such growers are almost certain to sustain a loss.

"The first characteristic of the strong plant is a strong and extensive root system, since with such a root system there usually goes a stock stem, which all growers like to have. Crowded plants cannot develop the right kind of roots, for the simple reason that they have not room enough for expansion. Some growers who aim to get an early start by sowing seed in the greenhouse or cold frame may often lose all they expect to gain, because they feel compelled to utilize all the space to the utmost by crowding the seedlings. In many such cases field sowing with more space between the plants would give as good or better results with less labor.

"It is the opinion of the experiment station authorities that transplanting could be done much more easily and cheaply than many growers seem to think. Where transplanting is not done, thinning is advised. Growers are urged to try the undercutting method on a few rows this year, as this method promises good results."

Homemade Corn Harrow.

A good corn harrow or cultivator can be made at home from two pieces of 2 by 4 scantling about five feet long. These are beveled at one end so as to fit close together and form a V. They are bolted together at this point by means of a clevis. At the opposite end a 2 by 4 piece is mortised at each end to fit similar mortises on the arms. This piece should be somewhat narrower than the distance between the rows. Along the V shaped sides six ordinary straight harrow teeth are placed. Another tooth is placed at each corner where the mortised ends join. Between these two corner teeth four other teeth are inserted, thus making eighteen teeth in the implement when completed. Its operation is the same as any other cultivator or between row harrow. Once down the row will pulverize the surface of ordinary soil fairly well, but twice will make a fine mulch and get rid of small weeds.

Dome of the Rock.

The name "Dome of the Rock" is one that has been conferred on the celebrated mosque of Omar, at Jerusalem. It stands on Mount Moriah, on the site once occupied by the temple of Solomon. Immediately under its dome an irregular shaped rock projects above the pavement. This rock was the scene of many Scriptural events and has been greatly revered for ages by Jews and Mohammedans.

THE FAMILY RENT GROUND.

The Garden Produces All the Vegetables That They Require, Tended as it is by the Entire Flock—German Girl Trained in Domestic Science.

This is the way of it. They take a street car to a vacant lot on the outskirts of the city, and they rent a patch of ground for about 20 marks a year to build a little house. Father drives the nails, and the children pass them up, and mother holds the board in place.

Nobody in Germany ever hires anything done that he or she can do for himself or herself. The house consists of one very small room with a tiny stove in one corner and a shelf to keep the plates on. And there is a little latticed porch that will be sure to be all around with roses. Outside they plant a tree or a flowering shrub and place beneath it the table and the bench and the three chairs for the quiet corner. The little house is not, of course, large enough to be used for sleeping purposes. But it does very well for light daytime housekeeping. The family spend the day in the outdoors, returning to their city apartment at night. Mother brings the children and comes here to sew in the afternoon. Father comes directly from work, and they have supper, and afterward they make the garden. All through the long, lovely Berlin summer evenings they tend it with German loving care.

The outskirts of Berlin are covered with the Lauben Kolonie in picturesque profusion, so that almost literally every vacant lot is planted with them. A garden produces for each family all of the summer vegetables and some for winter. There are also eggs from chickens. There must be the chickens, else what should be done with the waste leaves that have been picked from the plants?

tubs are kept well filled with water, as evaporation is rapid.

Hardy water lilies, callas, sweet flag, water poppy and water hyacinth are good plants with which to begin.

For the margins of the tubs flowering rush—an irislike plant with rose colored flowers—water arum, a miniature calla, Egyptian paper plant, cattails and parrot's feather all are easy to cultivate and are inexpensive.

Goldfish are an attractive addition to the water garden, and they thrive well, as the growing plants keep the water clean and pure. The goldfish also keep the little pond free from mosquitoes.

A large pond or basin lined with concrete is quite within the amateur gardener's reach if there be sufficient space and an ample supply of water, but the pond must be kept well filled to become a success. When the large concrete basin is used the roots of the lilies should be planted in boxes. Be sure that the boxes are large enough to give the roots ample room to spread and grow.

BABY'S TOILET SET.

EVERY LITTLE COSTUME CALLS FOR GLOVES TO MATCH ITS STYLE.

The critical taste in dress, which has encouraged hostelry to match your gowns and wigs and slippers and silk lingerie, among other things, is now coming around to silk gloves to go with your costume for the approaching summer.

No more may you buy gloves by the wholesale. Rather you select a white pair with a black and white fluted wrist frill to go with your black and white striped silk frock about gowns, or if you have a filmy, alluring, illusive light flummery dress for summer, with which you are wearing a rose garden of a summer hat, then you have a long pair of white silk gloves with a plaited ruffle running up the side from the wrist to the top, the ruffle of a hue to harmonize with your gown.

And as they have shoes lacing up the sides there is reason to believe there will be gloves—white silk, with the lacing of contra color to harmonize with the dress. Then, of course, gloves come in all solid colors too. There are tucks that girdle the arms of the gloves and hemstitching and cobweb patterns to add to the gayety of the season.

WOMANLY CHATTER.

How to Make a Charming Water Garden With Aid of Tub and Hose.

Most persons who love all flowers have longed at some time for a water garden, but very few attempt to create one.

There appears to be a widespread impression that water lily growing is an expensive pastime and one that requires considerable skill. As a matter of fact a very charming little water garden can be made with the aid of a tub and a garden hose, and the lilies are not difficult to grow. If you have only a small space a few tubs or half barrels sunk into the ground about three-quarters of their depth will furnish the easiest beginning. Put these in the sunniest spot and plant flags and other moisture loving plants around the edges. Fill two-thirds of the depth of the tubs with rich soil. Three parts loam and one part well rotted cow manure is a good mixture. Cover the soil with half an inch of clean white sand and turn in the water.

After the tubs are filled with water let them stand for two or three days until the water is warmed by the sun to the same temperature as the air;
then set in your lilies. After the roots are in the tubs be careful that the Uses For Salt.

Salt puts out a fire in the chimney.
Salt in solution inhaled cures cold in the head.

Salt in whitewash makes it stick.
Salt and soda are excellent for stings.
Salt as a gargle will cure soreness in the throat.

Salt used in sweeping carpets keeps out moths.

Salt thrown on a coal fire which is low will revive it.

Salt and vinegar will remove stains from discolored teacups.

Salt thrown on soot which has fallen on the carpet will prevent stain.

Salt put on ink when freshly spilled on a carpet will prevent a stain.

Never salt meat that has to be grilled, as it helps to harden the fibers of the meat and tends to extract the juices. Salt on the platter before sending to the table. No meat should be salted uncooked, but after the surface has been seared and meat partly cooked.

WOMAN'S PLACE.

[Translated from a work published in 1578.]

The snails, when crawling to and fro,
Can take their homes wherever they go.
And sages say that from their guild Men learned to hew and carve and build

A woman, going in and out,
In spirit bears her home about;
She cannot hang it on a nail
And leave it. Thus she's like the snail.

She must with wheel and loom abide,
The while her husband works outside.
Her task is neither low nor mean.
Does honey shame the bee's fair queen?

The queen must stay within the hive
If she would wish the work to thrive.
Whoever heard of any fish
That would stay fresh in a dry dish?

No life unto the snail is left
If she is of her shell bereft.
So, too, a wife should be downhearted
If she from home too long is parted.

CHLOROFORM IN FICTION.

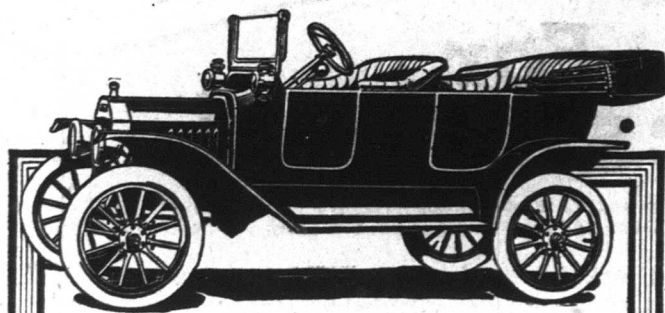

It Acts in a Manner That Surprises
the Medical Experts.

Every now and then stories appear about individuals and even whole households being chloroformed by enterprising burglars. A report of that kind in New York city induced the New York Herald to interview a number of experts on the subject with the result of obtaining a verdict that should effectively dispose of that sort of fiction for all time, but probably will not, as previous exposures have failed.

These medical witnesses pointed out it generally requires the undivided attention of two surgeons and several nurses to induce a willing patient to yield to the fumes. If, it is suggested, the burglars have found a more expedient mode of administration the medical world would be glad to hear of it. Dr. James J. Walsh, an authority on anaesthesia, said that the application of a chloroform soaked cloth to a victim's nostrils would produce a burning sensation that would at once arouse the sleeper.

Dr. J. T. Gwathmey, author of a text book on anaesthesia, said bluntly that it is not possible to chloroform a grown person while asleep. Another expert said he could not see how a person could be anaesthetized without realizing the fact and instances a slight woman patient who required four attendants to hold her while being put under the influence of chloroform on the operating table.

Tales of wholesale chloroforming, either by saturated cloths or atomizers, may therefore, in view of this testimony, be relegated to the realm of the imaginary.

The Postoffice Department at Ottawa, calls attention to the fact that letters addressed to soldiers at the front should be signed by writers in full. Where letters signed by Christian name only cannot be delivered owing to the addressees being missing, wounded, or dead, it is impossible for the Canadian postal service to return them to senders. In view of this, the public is urged to fully sign all letters addressed to soldiers at the front, and in addition to this to indicate the name and address of the sender on the upper left hand corner of the address side of the envelope. In this way the return of letters, should necessity arise, will be absolutely insured.

This is due to the past splendid record of Canadian Municipal securities for absolute safety and present attractive prices.

Hurrah for Our Boy Scouts!

The Napanee Boy Scouts accompanied the Oddfellows' excursion to Trenton on Wednesday and took part in the sports. They were successful in winning the silver cup for best all round troop, also a set of flags for six best signallers (first prize), second prize for best drilled troop and first prize for best general appearance. Our boy scouts though only in training for a few months, are doing splendidly and deserve every encouragement from our citizens. Mr. Aulph, the leader of the scouts, is to be congratulated on the efficiency of his boys.

"Our Home Industry Organized 177"

The agents of the Lennox and A. dington Mutual Fire Insurance Company laid before the directors at their regular monthly meeting July 3rd, applications (and these from among the wealthiest and most respected farmers of these counties) covering insurance of 135,595. This goes to show that the policy now issued by our home company, which insures ordinary contents of dwelling and one heading, insures farm implement and vehicles in any building on the farm, and stock against fire or lightning in buildings or in pasture, or the road to market, is a policy from to meet the requirements of the farmer and is being much appreciated. In case of loss you deal with men of your own class; a square deal and prompt settlement. Encourage home industry.
